PREFACE

THE Vedāntasāra is an easy and concise commentary on the Brahmasūtras of Bādarāyaṇa who is believed to be identical with Vyāsa, the famous author of the Mahābhārata. The Vedāntasāra was written by Bhagavad Rāmānuja (1017 to 1137 A.D.) in accordance with the views of the Vis'iṣṭādvaita school of Vedānta. S'rī Rāmānuja was born at S'riperumbudur near Kāñcīpuram as the son of Kes'avasomayājin and Bhūdevī. He was the pupil of Mahāpūrṇa and younger contemporary of S'rī Yāmunācārya of S'rirangam. His other works are: S'rībhāṣya, Bhagavadgītābhāṣya, Vedārthasaṁgraha, Vedāntadīpa, Gadyatraya and Nityagrantha. Regarding the complete biography of S'rī Rāmānuja, the attention of the readers is drawn to the Rāmānujacampū of Rāmānujācārya, published in the Madras Govt. Oriental MS. Series No. 6. His doctrine and teaching have been fully dealt with by Prof. P. N. Srinivasacarya in his book entitled 'The Philosophy of Vis'iṣṭādvaita' published in the Adyar Library Series No. 39. This system was first expounded by S'rī Nāthamuni, was developed to a great extent by S'rī Yāmunācārya through his works and was well preserved by S'rī Rāmānuja through his works like the S'rībhāṣya, and Vedārthasaṁgraha, after refuting the contrary views of the opponents.

Perhaps this edition of the Vedāntasāra with English translation is unique in its kind and I believe it will render great and valuable service to the research scholars in their comparative and critical study of the Vedānta philosophy.

from the Greek literature. But the Indian writers have not mentioned the date of their composition in any of their works. Hence it is not possible to determine exactly when these Sūtras were composed. But the general impression is that Bādarāyaṇa, who is no other than Vyāsa, lived about 3101 B. C. i.e. the beginning of the Kali age.

These Sūtras, as already stated, are short and cryptic statements. They can be interpreted in any way as the commentators liked. Hence they had a number of commentators, namely, S'rī S'aṁkara, Rāmānuja, Pūrṇaprjña, Bhāskara, Nimbārka, Vallabha and others. Each of these commentators interpreted the Sūtras in his own way different from the others. At times, a Sūtra was split into two by certain commentators or some of the Sūtras are missing in certain commentaries.

S'rī Rāmānuja has contributed nine works in Sanskrit on the Vis'iṣṭādvaita philosophy. None of his Tamil works is available so far. The Sanskrit works are (1) Vedāntasāra, (2) Vedāntadīpa, (3) S'rī-Bhāṣya (4) Gītābhāṣya, (5) Vedārthasaṁgraha, (6) S'araṇāgatigadya, (7) Vaikuṇṭhagadya, (8) S'rī-raṅgagadya and (9) Nityagrantha. Of these, the S'rī-Bhāṣya is an elaborate commentary on the Brahmasūtras of Bādarāyaṇa. Vedāntasāra is a very concise commentary on the same and Vedāntadīpa is a commentary in between these two.

In the introduction to his Vedāntadīpa S'rī Rāmānuja summarises the teachings of Vedānta to the following effect: Of the three ultimate entities known to philosophy, the intelligent individual soul is essentially different from the non-intelligent matter and the Supreme Brahman. The essential differences thus existing between matter, soul and the Brahman, are intrinsic and natural. God, who is the same as the Supreme Brahman, is the material and efficient cause of the universe; and the universe, which is made up of matter and soul, is the effect produced by Him. Matter and soul form the body of God, and this body is capable of existing in a subtle, as well as in a gross condition. God with his subtle body constitutes the universe in His casual condition; and with His gross body, He forms the created universe itself. The individual souls enter into matter and thereby make it live. Similarly God enters into matter and soul and give them their powers and their specific characters. The universe without God is exactly analogous to matter without soul and in the world, as we know it, all things are what they are, because God has penetrated into them and rules and guides them all from within, so much so that all things are representatives of Him and all words denote Him in the main.

S'rī Rāmānuja has based his commentaries on the following works: (1) Divyaprabandha of S'rī S'aṭhakoṭa; (2) Siddhitraya (3) Āgamaprāmāṇya and (4) Stotraratna of S'rī Yāmuna; and (5) Nyāyatattva and (6) Yogarahasya of S'rī Nāthamuni. Of these the Divyaprabandha is written in Tamil and the rest are all written in Sanskrit. Further S'ri Nāthmuni's works are not available now.

Certain special features can be noted in S'rī Rāmānuja's works. Of all the Sanskrit commentators of the Brahmasūtra, Rāmānuja is unique in one respect and that is this namely he proved the relation between the Brahman on one side and the souls and matter on the other, in the form of soul and body (S'arīra-s'arīribhāva) so that all the scriptural texts on the Bheda and Abheda between them, could be sensibly interpreted. In support of this view he mentions Bodhāyana, Dramiḍa, Guha, and Ṭaṅka and others, who had lived before him and who had written treatises on the Brahmasūtras. He also states in S'rī-Bhāṣya that he has followed their teachings in this work.

S'rī Rāmānuja has held that the twelve chapters of Pūrva-mīmāṁsa, four chapters of Saṁkarṣakāṇḍa and the four chapters of the Brahmasūtras constitute one system of philosophy. In support of this view, he has quoted the passage from Bodhāyana thus: "संहितमेतच्छारीरकं जैमिनीयेन षोडशलक्षणेनेति शास्त्रैकत्वसिद्धि.". The authors of these three works are different persons, but these constitute one main work, as they deal with one subject. Jaimini begins his work with Atha (then). The Brahmasūtras also begin with Atha. By this, it is not correct to hold that they are different works. Even in Jaimini's Mīmāṁsāsūtras different chapters begin with the word Atha.

According to S'rī Rāmānuja, Bhaktiyoga is the means for the realisation of the Self and the attainment of Mokṣa which constitutes eternal Bliss. It is synonymous with Upāsana (meditation). That Bkakti (devotion) results wholly from Viveka (discrimination), Vimoka (freedom), Abhyāsa (practice), Kriyā (work), Kalyāṇa (auspiciousness), Anava-sāda (absence of weakness), and Anuddharṣa (absence of excessive merriment); because it is only so possible, and because also there is scriptural authority to that effect.

Who then is this Brahman? S'rī Rāmānuja defines Him thus: 'By the word Brahman is denoted the Highest Person who is, by nature, devoid of all evils and is possessed of a host of auspicious qualities, which are innumerable and unsurpass-able in excellence. For, everywhere in the contexts the word Brahman is seen to have been derived from the association of Bṛhattva (greatness) and whatever greatness is, by nature as well as by qualities, unsurpassable in excellence, that is its primary and natural meaning. And He who possesses such greatness, is alone the Lord of all. Hence the word Brahman is primarily used to signify Him alone. In cases where, on account of the association of a modicum of that quality, other things than the Lord are meant by the word Brahman, it must have been used in a secondary sense; because it is improper to postulate a variety ot meanings for it, as it is improper in the case also of the word, Bhagavat. He is the Supreme Self known as Nārāyaṇa whose abode is S'rī Vaikuṇṭha and whose consort is S'rī or Mahā-Lakṣmi.

The Brahmasūtras consist of four Adhyāyas (chapters) and each of the four chapters consists of four Pādas (parts). The first chapter is called the Samanvayādhyāya and it determines that the Brahman is the cause of creation, sustenance and destruction of the universe. The second chapter is called the Avirodhādhyāya and it removes any inconsistency that may arise for such determination. It establishes firmly what the first chapter has done. The third chapter is called Sādhanādhyāya and it mentions the means for attaining the Brahman. The last chapter is called Phalādhyāya and it treats of the results obtained from that means. In the scheme of things, the first two chapters are quite distinct from the last two chapters.

The Vedāntasūtra begins with this benedictory verse:

'I bow unto Viṣṇu who has for his body all the sentient and the nonsentient beings, who is the Self of all objects, who is associated with the Goddess S'rī; who is the Ocean of Bliss untainted with impurity'.

By this we learn that the Supreme Being according to S'rī Rāmānuja is Viṣṇu who has for his body all the sentient and the non-sentient beings. It is also clear that the sentient beings, the non-sentient things and the Lord are distinct from each other and that the Lord is possessed of a host of auspicious qualities bereft of all evils. The Lord could only be approached through Bhakti (devotion) or Prapatti which is only a form of Bhakti (devotion).

I Adhyāya. The four Sūtras establish in a short compass the system of philosophy and religion as enunciated by Rāmānuja, thus:

That the Vedāntas establish the Brahman, who is blameless and possessed of good qualities, who is the cause of the universe and who has the nature of unsurpassed bliss. The Brahman then is the object of highest pursuit and He is both the instrumental and material cause of the universe.

The Sūtras 5 to 12 refute the theory of Sāṁkhya that the Pradhāna or Prakṛti causes the world.

The Sūtras 13 to 22 advance another argument, namely: the Self mentioned for meditation in the text, 'Different from this which consists of knowledge, is the still Inner Self, the Ānandamaya' (Tait. II-I-1) etc., can only be the Highest Self and not the individual self.

The next two Sūtras determine that the Supreme Being is denoted by the word Ākāśa and Prāṇa; because there are the scriptural texts—"All these beings are, indeed, born out of Ākāśa" (Chānd. Up. I-9-11) etc.

The Sūtras 25 to 28 raise another point, namely: The word Jyotis (or light) occurring in the scriptural text, 'Now that Light, which shines beyond this Highest Heaven, etc. (Chānd. III-13-7) cannot be the digestive heat in the stomach, because in the same context, there occurs a reference to the Highest Person who is denoted by the word, Jyotis (light). Further there is nothing wrong if Jyotis is taken as the digestive heat; because the teaching here is a commendation enjoining the continued meditation of that Highest Person in the form of that digestive heat for the purpose of attaining the fruition of a desired result.

The last four Sūtras 29 to 32 state that the word Indra, used to denote Indra as identified with Prāṇa, refers to the Highest Person, whose body is Indra.

The remaining parts 2 to 4 also deal with certain scriptural texts and clearly state that the Universal cause is the Highest Self and not the individual selves. (Vide S'rī Vedāntades'ika's Adhikaraṇasārāvalī, verse 18 "तत्राद्येऽत्यन्तगूढाविशदविशदसुस्पष्टजीवादिवाचः".

II Adhyāya. The first two Sūtras of the first part of the second chapter deal with the topic: Kapila is a great sage, who composed the Sāṁkhyasūtras and he states that Pradhāna is the cause of creation etc., of the universe. As such his system has to be accepted. If an argument of this type could be accepted it will lead to the result, namely, Manusmṛti and other works will have no place and have to be discarded as useless. The Vedānta texts are in need of supplementary texts to establish their meaning. The other Smṛti writers have contradicted the meaning of the Vedānta texts. It is only Manu and others that have supported their meaning. Hence Manu and others and not Kapila, that have to be accepted as the authors of the supplementary texts.

The next Sūtra determines this point, namely: The Yogasūtras were composed by a great person like Hiraṇyagarbha. Hence it has to be accepted as a supplementary text. Here the argumentators have missed one important point. Hiraṇyagarbha is after all the four-faced Brahman, who is tainted with the qualities of Rajas and Tamas, and he has composed these Sūtras. Therefore it has to be assumed that these Yogasūtras are contaminated with the qualities of Rajas and Tamas. Hence they have to be rejected.

The next nine Sūtras raise an important point: The universe is a non-sentient being and the Brahman is a sentient being. A sentient being cannot be the material cause of a non-sentient being. This is so seen in the world. Hence Brahman could not be the cause of the universe. This is not correct. We find in the world that the sentient beings etc. are born out of the non-sentient ones. Therefore it is also appropriate to state that the Brahman is the cause of the world.

The next Sūtra states thus: Kaṇāda, Akṣapāda and the Buddha have accepted the atoms to be the cause of the world. Therefore their theory has to be accepted. This is not correct; because they have established their system on reasoning discarding the scriptural texts.

The next Sūtra states thus: The Brahman has for his body all the sentient and the non-sentient beings. Therefore he has to experience all pleasure and pain like any other individual self. This is not correct; because the pleasure and pain are subject to Karman and the Brahman is free from all Karmans.

The next six Sūtras state thus: The world which is effected by the Brahman is not different from the Brahman, because the effects such as pot etc. are perceived to be not different from their causes, the clod of clay etc.

The next three Sūtras raise an important point. Suppose the universe becomes identically one with the Brahman. Then the Brahman becomes tainted with the mistake, namely, that He is the creator of the universe that is not beneficial to Himself. This is not so; He is distinct from the universe in His essential nature as stated in the scriptural text, 'Remaining within the self' etc. Hence the faults of the world do not touch Him.

The first nine Sūtras of the second part of the second chapter state thus: 'The Pradhāna of the Sāṁkhyas cannot produce the universe; because the Pradhāna, which is non-sentient cannot produce the effect without the association of the sentient agent.

Then Bādarāyaṇa refutes the views of the Sautrāntika and Vaibhaṣika schools of Buddhism thus: The Bauddhas have accepted that the aggregates of earth etc. are nothing but the atoms. But their argument falls to the ground; because they have accepted the momentariness of all objects including the atoms that form the aggregate and are destroyed in the second moment of their existence.

The next three Sūtras refute the views of the Yogācāras thus: 'The views held by the school, that establish the negation of objects other than cognition, are not correct.' What is apprehended in the sentence, 'I know the pot' is the object that is used in the objective case. It is not possible to say that its negation is apprehended. The forms of cognition do produce in men the idea of particular objects and not the objects themselves.

The next Sūtra criticises the view of the Mādhyamika school. 'The view of universal voidness is not correct, because when the proposition is to be proved it should refer to the object of existence and not of nothingness.'

After refuting different views held by the opponents, Bādarāyaṇa comes to the Pāñcarātra school. This Adhikaraṇa is called as Utpattyasaṁbhavādhikaraṇa or the Pāñcarātrādhikaraṇa. He raises the objection against this school in the first two Sūtras and answers it in the last two Sūtras. According to him the Pāñcarātra system is entirely correct and it does not contradict the view of Vedānta. Saṁkarṣaṇa, Pradyumna and Aniruddha are different incarnations of Lord Vāsudeva,

The Caturvyūhopāsana is one of the Brahmavidyās like the Sadvidyā, Daharavidyā etc.

In the third part of the second chapter, the author determines that the spatial ether (Ākāsa) is a product as there are scriptural statements to prove this. Same could be said of the Vāyu etc.

Then he explains that the individual self is not pure consciousness as held by opponents. But he is a knower; and he is inseparably connected with another substance known as knowledge. With the help of this knowledge he is able to find out everything. This knowledge bears to the self the relationship of the rays to the object that emanates those rays.

The next seven Sūtras state thus: The self is the doer and not the three qualities, viz., Sattva, Rajas and Tamas; the next two Sūtras state thus: The actions of the individual self are all dependent upon the Highest Self. But it should not be said that the Highest Self is responsible for all man's actions, because man alone should choose the first action and the subsequent actions arise as a corollary to his first action.

The first three Sūtras of the fourth part of the second chapter state thus: 'The sense organs are all products in the same way as the spatial ether (Ākāsa) etc. because there is the scriptural statement.' The Sat, alone, my dear, was in the beginning!

The next two Sūtras state thus: 'The sense-organs are eleven in number and they move with the self.'

Then the topic of the Prāṇa is elaborately dealt with in this part.

III Adhyāya. The first seven Sūtras of the first part of the third chapter determine this point: 'The individual self when he moves from one body to another, goes enveloped by the rudiments of the elements',

The next four Sūtras state thus: 'On the passing of the works, the individual self returns to the world with a remainder of the works, whose fruit he has not enjoyed.

The next ten Sūtras state thus: Those who have done meritorious works, (Puṇya-karmans), reach the moon. But those who have done non-meritorious works (Pāpa-karmans) do not go to the moon.

The next Sūtra states thus: The individual self on his return journey from the moon passes through the ether, the wind, the smoke and the cloud in an order. Then he comes into the earth in the form of rain.

The first six Sūtras of the second part of the third chapter state thus: The objects seen in the dreams are real and not created by the individual selves: but they are the creations of the Highest Self.

The next two Sūtras state thus: 'In the deep state of sleep, it is stated that the individual selves sleep in the Nāḍīs and also in pericardium. When they awake they do not know that they have slept on the Brahman.' The next Sūtra states thus: 'The same person, (who was in a deep state of sleep) rises from sleep; because there are the works for which the person of defective knowledge has to undergo retribution; because also there is the remembrance.

The next fifteen Sūtras state thus: 'No mistake arises in he Highest Brahman, even if He remains as an immanent Self in all the four states, such as the waking state etc. In the scriptures and in the Smṛtis it is stated that Highest Brahman possesses twofold characteristics, namely, the absence of inauspicious qualities and the presence of all auspicious ones. Sins do cling to the individual selves. The individual selves and the Highest Self are encased in a body; yet their differential characteristics are stated in the scriptures.

The third and fourth parts of the third chapter deal with various Brahmavidyās which lead men to Mokṣa and other aspirations according to their wishes.

IV Adhyāya. The first two Sūtras of the first part of the fourth chapter states thus: 'The knowing that is useful for the attainment of the final release, has to be repeated more than once.' Bhagavān S'rī Kṛṣṇa states thus: 'Worship Me, with a devotion, directed to nothing else. Whose minds are fixed on Me I lift them before long etc.' (Bhag. Gī. 12-7). The next Sūtra states thus: 'The meditation should be on the Highest Self who is the Self of the individual selves. The next Sūtra state thus: 'The Highest Self should not be apprehended in the symbol of the mind etc.

He then states thus: Meditation has to be made every-day till death; because the scriptures say so. The next Sūtra states thus: When the meditation on the Brahman is begun the earlier sins do not cling to him; because those meditations have that power. The next Sūtra states thus: 'As regards the wise, the ordinary good deeds obstruct the attainment of final release. But as they grant undesierd fruits, they either do nothing to the selves or become destroyed. After death they do not yield any results. The next Sūtra states thus: 'The good and evil deeds performed before the acquisition of knowledge, become destroyed without granting any fruits. The texts say that they last till death.

The next three Sūtras state: Agnihotra etc. are the works to be performed by the Ās'ramin. The life of an Ās'ramin is only intended for the acquisition of knowledge. The good and bad deeds do not cling to a person, who has obtained the knowledge on the Brahman. Further the works done with knowledge cause obstruction to the grant of the fruits after death. The last Sūtra states thus: 'Having destroyed by enjoyment the two kinds of deeds, the self reaches the Brahman'.

The first two Sūtras of the second part state thus: 'The organ of speech and other sense-organs stop working at the time of death. Hence it is right to say that the sense-organs combine with the mind at death.

The next Sūtra states: At death the mind is combined with the breath (Prāṇa) and the Prāṇa with the self.

Then it is stated thus: The wise and the unwise follow the same path till they reach the path of light, etc. The Brahman could be reached only by traversing the path of light. A subtle body persists even after death.

Then the Sūtras state thus: The Highest Person remains within the heart of the individual selves. Through His grace the door of the heart becomes illuminated. Then he leaves the body through the Suṣumnā Nāḍī on his head'.

The next Sūtra states thus: 'The wise go upwards through the rays. These rays remain at night also. In the winter season they are covered with snow. The next Sūtra states thus: 'Even those, who die at night, reach the Brahman. The man must perform his duty, as long as he is encased in the body. The works, which have begun to produce the results, die with the body. They do not stand in the way of attainment of the Brahman.

The next two Sūtras state thus: The wise reach the Brahman even if they die during the southern progress of the sun. The Yogins remember both the paths and they will not be deluded by doubt.

The third part begins: 'The wise traverse by the path of right etc'.

The next two Sūtras state thus: The presiding deities of light etc. who are directed by the Highest Person are conductors of the wise. After lightning, the self reaches the Brahman. The next ten Sūtras state thus: Bādari thinks that those who meditate on the effected Brahman (i.e. Hiraṇyagarbha) traverse the path of light etc. Because the self that reaches Hiraṇyagarbha does not come back to the world; because when the world of Hiraṇyagarbha passes away, then the selves go with their ruler to the Highest. Jaimini thinks that the Highest alone should be meditated upon always. Bādarāyaṇa states that those who meditate upon the Brahman traverse the path of light etc. Some meditate upon the Brahman as the Self of their selves. While others meditate on their selves as having the Brahman for the Self.

The first three Sūtras of the fourth part state thus: 'The self reveals itself in all his glory when he reaches the Highest.'

The next Sūtra states thus: 'The released self experiences the Highest, who is his Self, as one with him.'

The next three Sūtras state thus: Jaimini thinks that the nature like that of the Brahman, such as free from sin, manifests itself in the individual Self. Auḍulomi thinks that his very nature is intelligence. But Bādarāyaṇa opines that he possesses both of them mentioned above.

The next two Sūtras state thus: 'The Highest Person, while in a sportive mood, is born as the son of Vasudeva and Daśaratha by His mere wills. In the same manner the released soul, who is included in the sportive activity of the Highest Brahman, can have father, etc. in the world through his will. But the released Self is not subject to Karman at anytime.

The next seven Sūtras state thus: Bādari holds that released Self does not possess a body and the sense-organs. Jaimini opines that he becomes manifold with the help of the body and sense-organs. But Bādarāyaṇa thinks that he possesses both these characteristics. The released Self does not possess bodies, that are his own creation. He enjoys the sport, created by the Highest Person. The Self enjoys everything by entering all as in the case of the lamp. The Self remains in one place. But he experiences everything through knowledge that acts as his light.

The next five Sūtras state thus: The released self possesses the character of the Highest Person except creation, sustenance, and destruction of the world.

The last Sūtra states thus: The released self does not come back again to the world.

S'ri Rāmānuja postulates Personal God. He defines the Brahman thus: 'By the word, Brahman, is denoted the Highest Person, who is, by nature, devoid of all evil, and is possessed of hosts of auspicious qualities, which are innumerable and unsurpassable in excellence. He accepts a world that is real, as is opposed to the world of illusion of the Advaitins. Of the means of attainment be accepts the Bhakti and Prapatti wherein the Lord is considered both as a means and the object of attainment. Only he attains the Lord whom' He elects with grace. This is the truth of this system.

In concluding I wish to offer my heart felt thanks to Rao Bahadur K. V. Rangaswami Ayyangar, at whose instance I translated into English the text of the Vedāntasāra and to Vaidyaratna G. Srinivasa Murti Director Adyar Library for undertaking to publish this work in the Adyar Library Series. My special thanks are also due to Pandit V. Krishnamacharya of the Adyar Library for revising the translation and editing it with the text. He also has added some necessary notes and a valuable introduction in Sanskrit. I request the general public to pardon me for any short comings that they may find in the work.

JIJÑĀSĀDHIKARAṆA 1

I BOW unto Viṣṇu,[1] who has as his body all the sentient and non-sentient beings, who is the self of all objects, who is associated with S'rī and who is the ocean of bliss untainted with impurity.

Vedāntasāra or the quintessence of Vedānta is extracted and offered to the public by the grace of the Highest Person.

Then therefore the inquiry into the Brahman.

Here the word, then is used in the sense of coming thereafter; because it is followed by the word therefore. The word, therefore, is used in the sense of causation of that which has been concluded previously. What has been concluded previously, is understood to be the knowledge of ritualistic works; because the inquiry into the Brahman, which is desired to be commenced here, happens to be a portion of the inquiry into the meaning of the Vedās. Indeed, for the person, who has completed his study of the Vedās, the first duty is to make an inquiry into the ritualistic works, as the Vedās commence to deal with them in the beginning. Hence it is stated "Then therefore the inquiry into the Dharma" (Mīm. 1. 1. 1). Taking the topic of Dharma separately, it is determined in the series of Sūtras ending with "[2] The priestly function must be common for all the castes as all are able to do it" (Mīm. 12-4-40) that the rituals of Prakṛti and Vikṛti kinds[2] are only the means to attain the three-fold object of human pursuit viz. Dharma (i.e. ritualistic works), Artha (i.e. wealth) and Kāma (i.e. gratification of desire).

The Vedās naturally imply their meaning. The ritualistic works are their meaning. It is also determined that these mere works can grant only the three-fold object of human pursuit stated above. It is roughly realised in Vedānta, which is a portion of the Vedās, that the ritualistic works give only small and transitory results and the Brahman-realization only can produce infinite and eternal results. Then, in the person, who wants to attain Mokṣa (i.e. final release), and who has determined that words can denote even the objects that have been already in existence, the desire to know the Brahman springs up. Therefore, it is stated in the Sūtra, "Then therefore the inquiry into the Brahman" (Br. S. I-1-1) that after the inquiry of Karman, by the very same reason the inquiry into the Brahman is to be made.

Here is the scriptural statement thus—'Having examined the worlds obtained by works, let a Brāhmaṇa acquire distaste on ritualistic works, as the object which is not in the scope of being effected could not be gained by action; to know that object let him approach with sacred fuel in hand necessarily a preceptor, who is learned in the Vedās and has a steady footing in the Brahman. To him (i.e. to such a pupil) who with tranquil mind and restrained senses has thus approached, that wise person (the guru) should speak of the knowledge about the Brahman by which he (the pupil) can know the ever-existing and indestructible Puruṣa (person)' (Muṇḍ. 1-2-12 & 13). Here the Brāhmaṇa is one, who is engaged in the study of the Vedās. The word Karmacitān means 'gained through the works'. The word worlds (lokān) means to imply 'those worlds that are destructible by nature as the deities worshipped are destructible'. He should determine thus on inquiry into Karman—'The Highest Person who is eternal can not be attainable by works'. He (i.e. the pupil) then acquires distaste in all worldly objects. To know That (Brahman) he should approach the preceptor alone with fuel in hand. The word, 's'rotriya' means, 'one who is learned in the Vedās up to the end'. The words 'who has a steady footing in the Brahman' mean 'One who has apprehended the true nature of the Highest Person'. Then he (the preceptor) should speak of the knowledge of the Brahman to him (the pupil) who approached him properly, with which knowledge the pupil can know the Eternal Highest Person. The perfect tense in the word Provāca should be taken to mean the injunction, because of the construction—'The pupil should approach the preceptor alone and the learned preceptor should teach him'. More over, the teaching by the preceptor is not known ordained otherwise. The perfect tense is ordained in the sense of injunction by the rule—'In Veda, the aorist, imperfect and perfect tenses are used in other senses also'. (Pāṇ. 3-4-6).

JANMĀDYADHIKARAṆA 2

2. Janmādyasya yataḥ.

(The Brahman is He) from whom (proceed) the creation, etc. of this Universe.

The scriptural text is this—'From whom all these beings are born; by whom, when born, they are all preserved and to whom they go back when they perish—do you desire to know that well, that is the Brahman'. (Tait. III-1-1). The meaning of the Sūtra is thus—The Vedic text declares that it is the Brahman, from whom proceed the creation, the sustenance and the destruction of the world—this world is a mixture of various sentient and non-sentient beings whose enjoyment of the pleasure and pain, has been settled. In this Sūtra, the word, 'from whom' is used in the ablative case to mean the causality in general; because it is applied in common to the creation, sustenance, and destruction (of the universe). His causality in production includes his being the efficient cause as well as the material cause. It is so, because the Vedic statement 'From whom etc.' is common to both.

रूपं विवक्षितम् । 'यतः' इति हि श्रुतिरुभयविषया । कथमिति चेत्, 'यतो वा इमानि' इति प्रसिद्धवन्निर्देशात्; प्रसिद्धेश्चोभयविषयत्वात् । "सदेव सोम्येदमग्र आसीदेकमेवाद्वितीयम् + तदैक्षत बहु स्यां प्रजायेयेति । तत्तेजोऽसृजत" इत्यत्र सदेवेदमग्र एकमेवासीदित्युपादानतां प्रतिपाद्य, अद्वितीयमित्यधिष्ठात्रन्तरनिवारणात् सच्छब्दवाच्यं ब्रह्मैव निमित्तमुपादानं चेति विज्ञायते । "तदैक्षत बहु स्यां प्रजायेय" इत्यात्मन एव विचित्रस्थिरत्रसरूपेण बहुभवनं संकल्प्य तथैव सृष्टिवचनाच्च । अतः श्रुतावपि 'यतः' इति हेतौ पञ्चमी ।

To the question—how is it? the reply is this—There is a clear reference to Him as being the cause of the creation, etc. (of the world) in the expression 'from whom etc.' as if He were a well-known celebrated Being. His celebrity includes the twofold causation said above. (Consider) the text 'Existence alone, my dear boy, this was in the beginning one only, without a second. . . . It thought 'May I become many and be born'. It created Tejas' (Chānd. VI-2-1 & 3). Here the expression 'Existence alone this was in the begnning one only' proves that He is the material cause (of the Universe). The expression 'without a second' refutes a different substratum. Hence it becomes known that the Brahman, who is denoted by the word 'existence' is both the efficient cause and the material cause (of the Universe). It is known also from the scriptual text "It thought 'May I become many and be born" that He did resolve to assume many variegated forms of sentient and non-sentient beings and then He did create (the Universe). Therefore the expression 'from whom' is used in the scripture with the ablative case in this sense of causality in general.

In this text (Brahmasūtra) itself the fact that the Brahman is both the material cause and the efficient cause (of the Universe) has been objected on the ground of logical contradiction and of the specific statement in the Vedic text, viz. "The magician created the Universe from this" (S'vet. IV-1-9) and subsequently maintained after refuting the objection in the Sūtras I-4-23 to 26.

How then does the Brahman—who is omniscient and omnipotent, who wills the truth and who has discarded all things unworthy to be of human pursuit as He himself being not tainted with evil—create the Universe, which is a mixture of various wonderful sentient and non-sentient beings ? The author of the Sūtras[1] himself will raise this objection and answer it. He raises the objection in Sūtras II-1-8 and II-1-21 and answers it in Sūtras II-1-9 and II-1-22.

The individual self is declared to be distinct from the Brahman in the series of scriptural texts and smṛti passages stated below :—

[1] Bādarāyaṇa is called the author of the Sūtras here.

'The destructible is the Avidyā or action. The immortal is the Vidyā or knowledge. He (the Brahman), who commands the Vidyā and the Avidyā is distinct from the soul.' (S've. 5-1).

'He is the cause. He is the lord of the lord of the senses (i.e. of the Jīva or the individual self). He has neither progenitor nor master' (S've. VI-9).

'The destructible is the Pradhāna or Prakṛti; the immortal and the indestructible is the Hara (i.e. the individual self) and the Lord alone rules over the destructible Prakṛti and the individual self' (S've. I-10).

The enjoying soul is said Hara because he takes the non-sentient things for his enjoyment.

'These are two Puruṣas in the world, the destructible and the indestructible. The destructible represents all beings, while the indestructible is said to be the unchanging one' (Bh. Gītā XV-16). But other than these, is the Highest Puruṣa called the Supreme Soul, who as the eternal Lord, supports the three worlds, having entered them. (Bh. Gītā XV-17).

Because I transcend the destructible beings and am also higher than the indestructible Jīva, am I celebrated in the world and in the Veda as the Supreme Person (Bh. Gītā XV-18).

The Brahman is Superior than and distinct from the individual self, who experiences distress and sorrow which are not fit to be the scope of human pursuit. The Brahman has for His body the individual selves and He is their Self. This fact has been established by hundreds of scriptural passages such as (a) " Remaining in the self + has the self as His body " (Mādhy-) and (b) " He is the inner self of all beings; He is devoid of all pains; He is the Divine Lord; He is the only one God Nārāyaṇa (Sub. VII). Though the embodied soul assumes the state of an effect, yet he is not tainted with evils of the effect, because the good and bad attributes are restricted in each case. There are illustrative examples for this. Therefore the Brahman is not tainted with evils. Hence there is no absurdity in the passages of Vedānta. This has been asserted in Sūtra 2-1-9. The illustrative example is this :—The self, that has a body, is denoted by various words, such as god, man etc. It assumes the various states of child-hood, youth, old age, etc. Yet the child-hood, youth, old age etc. are the faults that are attached to the body. They do not touch the self. In the same way the pleasure etc. that are closely attached to the self, do not touch the body. Therefore, the Brahman, both in the states of effect and cause, has the individual souls as His body and is the Self of those individual souls. Therefore the Brahman is denoted by the word, denoting the individual soul. Then it is right to state that the word, soul applies to the Brahman, because the Brahman and the individual selves co-exist in the same grammatical equation. In order to reason this fact, two other schools that have to be refuted have been stated in Sūtras I-4-20 and 21 and the Siddhānta views of reasoning are advanced in sūtra I-4-22. In the scriptural text, 'Having created it, He entered into it; having entered into it, He became the sentient and the non-sentient beings.' (Tait. II-6-1), it is seen that He remains in the position of the Self to all individual selves. Hence, the Brahman is denoted by the word, denoting the individual soul. It is also stated that He is mentioned as being co-extensive in the same grammatical equation with the individual soul. The inequalities in creation as god, men, etc. are caused by the Karmans done by the individual selves. This is asserted in Sūtra, II-1-34. The individual souls and the stream of Karmans that is attached to them, have not a beginning. This is asserted in Sūtra 2-1-35. That they have not a beginning has been established in the following scriptural texts, " The Eternal among eternals, the Intelligent among the intelligents " (S've. VI-13). " The two, namely, the Intelligent and non-intelligent' (S've. I-9). Though they have not a beginning, yet at the time of the deluge i.e. Pralaya, the sentient and the non-sentient beings, that assume the form of the enjoyer and the enjoyed can not be distinguished by the distinct names and forms. The Sūtrakāra has himself stated that the stress of oneness of the Brahman is reasonable. The scriptural text quoted here is this—" Indeed the Self alone was in the beginning and nothing else " (Ait. 1. I-1).

That the self is eternal and not produced has been proved in Sūtra II-3-18. That knowledge is the essential characteristic of the self has been proved in Sūtra II-3-19. That the self is atomic in size has been proved in Sūtra II-3-20. The self, who is the knower, has been mentioned by the term knowledge; because he has knowledge, as his essential attribute and because also he has to be defined and investigated by the means of the attribute, knowledge. This has been stated in Sūtras 11-3-29 & 30. In the Sūtra II-3-32 are stated the defects that arise in the schools that accept knowledge as the self, that accept the knowledge produced by other means as the self and that accept the self as being present everywhere. That the self is the doer of good and bad works and not Prakṛti has been stated in Sūtras II-3-33 to 39.

Suppose the Prakṛti is the doer, then this Prakṛti happens to remain common to all the individual selves. As such, all the individual selves must enjoy the fruits thereof. In Sūtras II-3-40 & 41, it is stated that the effert of the self has the approval of the Highest Person.

The inherent property and the natural state of the self has been stated to be many. They are—(a) dependent on Karman, (b) subject to affliction, (c) not all knowing, (d) his Mukti (or final liberation) is dependant upon the means of worship. That of the Brahman is stated to be (a) not tainted with faults, (b) all knowing, (c) Possessed of true will, (d) lord of all beings, The authorities are:

The Brahman pervades all the individual souls. Therefore He is mentioned as one with them. The authorities are :—

(2) 'This self is the Brahman' (Bṛ. VI-4-5).

(3) 'Therefore whatever that (deity) is, that am I and whatever I am, that is that (deity)' (Ait. Ār. II-2-46).

(5) 'This (the Jīva) is imperfect + should worship Him (the Brahman) as his self' (Bṛ. I-4-7).

(6) 'The Brahman are the fishermen, the Brahman are the slaves, the Brahman are these gamblers' (Brahmasūkta).

Therefore, it is to be granted that the self is a portion of the Brahman, so that the two statements mentioned above will not contradict each other.

This is not established by reasoning alone. The fact that the individual souls are part of the Brahman has been proved by the following scriptural texts and Smṛti passages :—

1. 'His one fourth part constitutes all the worlds' (Puru. Sū. 3-22).

2. 'In the word of life, the eternal soul is indeed a portion of mine' (Bha. Gī. XV-8).

The objection—a portion of an object means a part of a single unit. Therefore logically there is no possibility of any distinction between these two—is set aside in Sūtra 11. 3. 45.

The luminosity, the species, the attribute and the body belong to the fire, the substance, the attributed thing and the soul which are distinct from them. Yet they form a portion of the fire etc. In this way the individual souls become a portion of the Brahman, who has them as His body. The individual souls which are portions of the Brahman, have their own inherent characteristics; but the Brahman, of whom the individuals souls are portions, does not possess those characteristics because the things and their attributes are always found to be distinct from each other in regard to their natural state and inherent characteristics. Thus no contradiction arises in what is stated in Sūtras II-3-33 and 40. That the individual souls are portions of the Brahman in the same way as luminosity, etc. is stated by Parāśara and others—

(1) 'The fire remains in one place; but its light spreads all round. In this way, all the worlds are the manifestations of the power of the Brahman' (Viṣṇu I-22-56).

(2) 'Oh! twice-born one, which ever is created for its generation by an agent, it forms the body of Hari' (Viṣṇu I-22-38).

(3) 'All these are produced from a portion of Viṣṇu who appears as all beings' (Viṣṇu 1-22-20).

Otherwise, if it is viewed that the individual souls become a portion of the Brahman due to a certain limiting conditions, that are either of a true or of untrue nature all the faults, intended to be set aside by the Vedānta texts do attach themselves to the Brahman. This has been stated in Sūtra II-3-49. and so on.

Therefore, the Brahman has always as his body all the sentient and non-sentient beings and is the Self of all those beings. The Brahman is in the state of cause at that time, when His body constitutes the sentient and non-sentient beings without distinct names and froms. He is in the state of effect at that time, when His body constitutes the sentient and non-sentient beings with distinct names and forms. Though the sentient and the non-sentient beings are the body of the Brahman; yet the sentient and the non-sentient beings, who form the body of the Brahman, do undergo changes and are the seat of the evils. Even then, the Brahman who is the Self of these objects, is the ocean of auspicious qualities, such as knowledge, bliss, etc. which are innumerable, unsurpassable in excellence and opposed to all evils. That Brahman is the efficient cause and the material cause of the world is established by the text, 'From whom all these beings are born' Tait. III-1-1). Thus this has been correctly stated—He is the Brahman, from whom proceed the creation, etc. of this universe.

Consider the scriptural text—'Existence alone, my dear boy, this word was in the beginning one only, without a second. It thought may I become many and be born' (Chānd. VI-2-1). The meaning of this text is this—That Brahman has always all the sentient and the non-sentient beings as the body has been proved by the following scriptural texts—

(1) 'He, whose body is the self' (Mādh. Brāhmaṇa).

(2) 'He, whose body is the indestructible one, He, whose body is the earth, He, whose hody is the Avyakta, He is the inner Self of all beings; He is devoid of sins, He is the Divine Lord, He is the One Nārāyaṇa' (Sub. VII-1).

Now the Existence, that has the sentient and non-sentient beings in a gross form as Its body, manifested Itself as having a distinct name and form. It in the beginning i.e. at the time of the deluge, remained only one having as Its body all the sentient and non-sentient beings in a subtle form, and did not manifest Itself as having a distinct name and form. The Brahman Himself who is omniscient and omnipotent, remained without a second, not requiring any other effiicient cause.

The meaning of the scriptural text, 'It thought—May I become many and be born' (Chānd. VI-2-1) is this—The Brahman remained only one having as His body, all the sentient and non-sentient beings, that had neither name nor form in their subtle state. It thought of becoming many by assuming a gross form, that has a distinct name and form. The words, 'May become' and 'Be born' indicate respectively the distributive and aggregate forms of creation. All Vedāntins accept this doctrine viz—At the time of deluge, the intelligent and the non-intelligent beings do assume a subtle and indescribable difference from the Highest Person. Other Vedāntins also accept the difference between them produced by ignorance or limiting conditions as beginningless. Here the peculiarity is this: In the other schools the Brahman becomes ignorant and is associated with limiting conditions. This is opposed

(That the Brahman is the cause of the creation etc. follows altogether from the scripture), because the scripture alone forms the source (of the knowledge related to Him).

The Brahman, who has as His body all the sentient and non-sentient beings, is the material cause and also the efficient cause of the Universe. This fact could not be apprehended by reasoning; but could be proved by scriptures alone. Therefore it is established that the scriptural text 'From whom, all these things are born (Tait. III. 1) discerns the Brahman, who is the only cause of all the worlds.

SAMANVAYĀDHIKARAṆA 4

4. Tattu samanvayāt.

That (viz. the fact that the scriptures form altogether the source of the knowledge relating to the Brahman) results, however, from (His constituting) the true purport (of the scripture).

His constituting the true purport of the scripture is the same as His being the object of human pursuit. Though the function of the proof, known as scripture, ends in determining the object of human pursuit; Yet the Brahman, who is experienced equally by Himself and others in His natural state, in His peculiar characteristics and in His great splendour, is of unsurpassed bliss and this is intended to be denoted by the S'āstra. Therefore it is quite right that Brahman could be proved by the S'āstra. Thus there is no any defect.

ĪKṢATYADHIKARAṆA 5

It has been previously stated that the Vedāntas establish the Brahman, as the sole cause of the entire universe. He alone is the efficient cause of the entire universe. At the same time He is in the form of the universe, as He is its material cause also. This fact has to be determined by the Sāstras only as the inferential reasoning is incapable of proving it. He is the highest object of human pursuit; because His essential characteristic constitutes the unsurpassable bliss. Therefore the Vedāntas surely teach about Him. This fact has been firmly established before. Then in the rest of this Pāda it is stated that as the Prakṛti and the individual selves are not fit to be mentioned as the cause of the world. The Vedāntas teach about the Brahman only, who is omniscient, who possesses a true will, who is hostile to all evils such as ignorance etc. and who is the ocean of innumerable noble qualities.

Of these, the author first states that the Prakṛti could not be mentioned in the Vedānta as the cause of the world.

5. Īkṣaternāśabdam.

Because the predicative root, Īkṣ is used (in connection with the activity of what constitutes the cause of the world) that which is not in the scope of the scripture alone (viz. the Pradhāna or Prakṛti,) is not (referred to in the scriptural passage relating to the cause of the world).

That which is not capable of being revealed by the scripture alone, is meant here by the term As'abda i.e. Ānumānika that which is established by the process of logical inference, i.e. the Pradhāna. The meaning is that the Pradhāna, is not apprehended by the Vedānta. Why? Because the root Īkṣ (to see, i.e. to think) is used. That is because the root, Īkṣ is used in the scriptural passage 'It thought May I become manifold and be born' (Chānd. VI-2-3) to denote the activity of the universal cause; closely related to what is stated in the text, 'Existence alone, my dear boy, was in the beginning, one only without a second' (Chānd. VI-2-1).

6. Gauṇas'cennātmas'abdāt.

If it be said that it (viz. the root Īkṣ), is used here in a figurative sense, it cannot be so; because there is the word Ātman (mentioned in the context).

In the scriptural statement 'That fire thought' (Chānd. VI-2-3) the root Īkṣ is used in conection with the action of the non-intelligent substance also. The root apparently is there used in a figurative sense. Likewise in the case of the Pradhāna also, the root Īkṣ is used in a figurative

In fact as regards fire etc. also the power of seeing is not to be explained in a figurative sense, because the words fire etc. denote the Brahman only who has them as His body. All these objects are distinguishable as having a name and form; because the Brahman has entered them, through the individual souls which constitute His body. It is because there is the statement, 'Indeed entering in the form of the individual self, I evolve the differentiation of names and forms' (Chānd. VI-3-2). The intelligent and the non-intelligent substances are separately stated in the text 'Having created it, He entered the same; Having entered it, He became Sat and Tyat (intelligent and non-intelligent), describable and not describable, the support and supported, the animate and inanimate, the truth and untruth. Because also it is not declared that it (viz. what is denoted by the word sat or existence) deserves to be discarded.

Then there is contradiction in the school that accepts the Pradhāna as the cause of the world; because Pradhāna cannot produce the sentient being. Consider the school that accepts Brahman, who is different from the Pradhāna, to be the cause of the world. Then the Brahman, having as his body all the sentient and non-sentient beings, with distinct names and forms is the effect and without distinct names and forms is the cause. Hence it is correct to say that by the knowledge of the Brahman the knowledge of everything is produced.

10. Svāpyayāt.

Because also, there is (mentioned in the context) the withdrawal (of the individual soul) into its own Self.

By the following reason also the Pradhāna is not the cause of the creation etc. of the world. The scriptural passage—' Know from me, my dear boy, what deep sleep is; when any person is known to be asleep, he is then in union with the Sat. He withdraws into his Self. Therefore they say, he sleeps; because he is absorbed into His Self (i.e. into the Brahman)' (Chānd. VI-8-1)—declares that the individual self, who is asleep and is in union with the Sat, has withdrawn himself to his Self. Hence it is known that what is denoted by the word Sat, is an object other than the Pradhāna. The expression, 'Has withdrawn himself to his Self' means becomes merged or absorbed into his Self.

It is declared in the scriptural passage relating to the differentiation of names and forms, that the Brahman Himself, who has the intelligent and non-intellegent beings for His body and forms their selves, is denoted by the word self which ordinarily means the individual self. By means of the statement, 'He is then in union with the Sat; He withdraws into his Self' (Chānd. VI-8-1), it is taught that the Brahman, who is denoted by the word mentioning jīva, is free from any association with names and forms at the time of deep sleep also, as He is at the time of universal dissolution and He is hence to be denoted merely by the word Sat or Existence.

To the same effect, it is stated in a similar context elsewhere that, owing to his (i.e. the individual self) not being associated with names and forms, he is embraced by Him who is omniscient; and consequently it is said that, 'when he is embraced by the omniscient Self, he does not know anything that is external or internal' (Bṛh. IV-3-21). Indeed till his final release the individual soul is associated with names and forms; and it is, therefore, there is born in him the knowledge of objects other than himself. At the time of deep sleep he certainly gives up names and forms, and is embraced by the Sat (i.e. by the Brahman); and again in waking state, he becomes associated with names and forms and becomes possessed with various names and forms. This is clearly stated in other scriptural passages, namely, 'When he (i.e. the individual self) is deeply asleep, he sees no dreams whatsoever, and he becomes one wholly with the Prāṇa (Brahman).' (Kauṣ. II. 30). 'From that Self, the Prāṇās (i.e. Jīvas) proceed towards their own places' (Kauṣ. II-34). To the same effect is the

Because there has to be similarity of import (between the passage under reference and the other passages relating to the case of the creation etc. of the world).

There has to be similarity of import among all other Upanishadic passages and the upanishadic passage under reference. Hence it is known that the Pradhāna is not the cause of the creation, etc. of the world. In all the scriptural passages stated below, the Lord of all is made out to be the cause of the world—

(1) 'The Self, indeed, this one only was in the beginning. Nothing else lived. He thought, May I create the worlds. He created these worlds' (Ait. I-1).

12. S'rutatvācca

Because also it is revealed (in the very Upaniṣad in which the passage under discussion occurs, and in other Upaniṣads, that the Supreme Self is the cause of the universe).

Indeed, in this Upaniṣad (viz. the Chāndogya) in the following passages, 'From the Self the Prāṇa came into existence etc, and from the Self, the spatial ether came into existence (chānd. VII-26-1)' it is stated that all are produced from the Self only. Therefore that the cause of the universe is the Brahman who is all-knowing Highest person and distinct from the inanimate Pradhāna, stands firmly.

13. Ānandamayobhyāsāt

That, which is denoted by the term Ānandamaya (is the Brahman); because there is (in the context), the repetition of various grades (of bliss which culminate in the Ānandamaya or the Highest Bliss).

No doubt the individual self, that possesses intelligence and that is different from the Pradhāna, has the power of seeing; yet the individual self, neither in the state of bondage nor in the state of final release, can be the cause of the universe. The scriptural text beginning with 'From the same self, the spatial ether came into existence' and ending with 'Different from this Vijñānamaya,[3] is the Inner-Self Ānandamaya[4]' (Tait. II-1-1) declares that the Ānandamaya mentioned as the cause of the universe, is the all-knowing Highest

Self, who is other than the individual soul. Why? Because of the repetition. Because there is repetition of the bliss in various grades which culminates in the Ānandamaya and which (bliss) forms the summits of unsurpassable condition. This Ānandamaya of the unsurpassable condition is repeatedly mentioned in the text, for meditation 'The hundredfold of the bliss of Prajāpati is equal to the single bliss of the Brahman (Tait. II-8-4), 'Wherefrom speeches together with the mind return not having reached it. He who knows the Brahman's bliss fears not from anything' (Tait. II-3-8).

14. Vikāras'abdānneti cenna prācuryāt

It may be said that owing to there being the affix (Maya) significant of modification, (the Ānandamaya is) not (the Brahman); but it is not (right to say) so because that (affix Maya) signifies abundance.

The affix Mayaṭ means modification in the context 'That this person is Annarasamaya (i.e. the modification of the essence of food)' (Tait. II-1-3). Therefore, the term Ānandamaya also means the modification of bliss. Hence Ānandamaya is not the Highest Self, that does not undergo modification. It is not so. Because there is contradiction of the purport, the affix Mayaṭ is understood to mean here 'abundance'. The scriptural text 'From that very same Self, the spatial ether came into existence' (Tait. II-1-1) refers to the Self, that does not undergo modification. The notion that the affix Mayaṭ denotes modification, has been given up already in the case of Prāṇamaya. Following this argument, it should be accepted that the Ānandamaya is only the Highest person; because there is an abundance of bliss in Him.

15. Taddhetuvyapadeśācca

Because also this Ānandamaya is declared (in the contex) to be the cause of that (which forms the bliss of the individual selves).

'For, He Himself causes the bliss' (Tait. II-7-1). In this passage it is declared that Ānandamaya causes the bliss of

16. Māntravarṇikameva ca gīyate

Because also that the same Being, who is denoted by the words of the Mantra (in the context), is declared (as the Ānandamaya).

That same Brahman, who is described by the words of the Mantra, 'The Brahman is Reality, Knowledge, Infinity' is spoken of as the Ānandamaya in the passage 'Verily from this' (Tait. II-1-1). Hence the Ānandamaya is not the individual self.

17. Nētaronupapatteḥ

He, who is other (than the Brahman) is not (that Being, who is described by the words of the Mantra) because (in such a case) there would be inappropriateness.

It should not be doubted that the other (individual self) is denoted by the words of the Mantra. The individual self, either in his state of bondage or in the state of final release, cannot have such Vipaścittva or extraordinary intellect mentioned in the scriptural text, ' He enjoys all desires and the intelligent Brahman (Tait. II-1-2). It is stated in the subsequent text, ' It thought, may I become many ' (Chānd. VI-2-1 & 3), that the intelligence (Vipaścittva) is only in the form of the will of the lord in assuming many forms of wonderful things including movable and immovable beings. Though the liberated soul, is all-knowing, yet he cannot create the world. Hence he cannot have such Vipaścittva (intelligence) of the type stated above.

18. Bhedavyapadeśācca

Because also there is (in the context) the declaration of difference (between the individual self and the Brahman).

That the Ānandamaya is distinct from the individual soul known as Vijñānamaya is declared in the Scriptural text, ' Different from this Vijñānamaya (the individual soul) is this Inner-self, the Ānandamaya (Tait. II-5). It should not be doubted that the term Vijñānamaya means mere intellect on the ground that the Vijñānamaya is mentioned as mere intellect in the text 'Vijñāna (intellect) performs the sacrifice' (Tait. II-5-1). The Sūtrakāra himself will clear this doubt in Sūtra II-3-35. In the seriptural text 'The intellect performs the sacrifice (Tait. II-5-1), the word intellect denotes the individual self who is the agent of the sacrifice. If the word, Vijñāna means intellect alone and not the individual self, then the reading of the text would be in a different way; because intellect is only an instrument of action.

19. Kāmācca nānumānāpekṣā

Because also His will (is in itself the cause of creation) the Pradhāna is not needed (by Him in the act of creation).

That the creation of the world is effected by His will alone is stated in the scriptural statement, 'He desired may I become manifold and be born' (Tait. II-6-1). It is seen that the individual soul requires the Pradhāna for the production of something. The Pradhāna is Ānumāna because it is proved by the inferential reasoning.

20. Asminnasya ca tadyogaṁ śāsti

Because also the scripture declares that the individual self's acquisition of the bliss takes place when he is in association with this (Ānandamaya).

The scriptural text declares that this individual soul gets bliss on reaching Him. The scriptural text is this 'Bliss, indeed, is He. Having obtained that very same Bliss, he (i.e. the individual self) becomes blissful (Tait. II-7-1). Therefore Ānandamaya is the all-knowing Highest Person, who is the cause of the world and who is other than the individual self.

ANTARADHIKARAṆA 7

21. Antastaddharmopadeśāt

He, who is within the sun and the eye is the Brahman; because His attributes are declared in the context.

It should not be doubted that the Ānandamaya, who is the cause of the world, omniscient and blissful is understood to be an individual self endowed with extraordinary merits and not the Supreme Self, because he is said to have a body. It refers to the Supreme Person and the Highest Self, that is denoted by the word, Person, occurring in the scriptural statement 'The Person, who is seen within the sun, He is brilliant like gold etc.' (Chānd. I-6-6). Why? Because His attributes are declared in the context. The attributes of the Highest Person, who is other than the individual self, are (a) His unlimited Lordship over all the worlds and all the desires (b) His not being under the influence cf Karman. The scriptural authorities are—'He is the lord of all the worlds and also of all desires' 'His name is 'High'. This same person is risen above all sins' (Chānd. I-6-7).

The scriptural text, 'I know this Great Person of sun-like lustre, who is altogether beyond darkness' (Tait. Ār. III-13-1) states that He has an immaterial form, that is peculiar to Him and that could not be included among the modifications of the Prakṛti of Triguṇa (i.e. Sattva, Rajas, and Tamas) in the same way as the quality of knowledge. That knowledge, etc. are His attributes is clearly seen in the scriptural texts—(1) 'The Brahman is the Reality, Knowledge' (Tait. II-1-1). (2) 'He, who knows all and understands all' (Muṇḍ. I-1-9). (3) 'His supreme power is declared, as varied and natural as well as His activity with knowledge and strength,' (S'vet. VI-8). That He has a divine form peculiar to Himself has been stated in the scriptural text, 'He is of sun-like lustre and altogether beyond darkness' (Tait. Ār. III-13-1). Hence He is known to be of that form.

The Vākyakāra[1] also states thus—'The passage 'The Golden Person is beheld' (Chānd. I-6-6) refers to the Wise and Inner One, because He is described as the Lord of the world and the Lord of desires and also as raised high above evils'. Then in the next sentence 'His form is artificial and is assumed to bless His devotees because He displays His sovereign power' he (the Vākyakāra) introduces for refutation the view that His form must be a phase of effect or it must be illusory. Then (he himself) replies thus—'His form is indeed beyond the reach of the sense-organs; because it is mentioned to be perceived by Antaḥkaraṇa (or inner sense.' Dramiḍācārya has commented upon it thus—'The form of the creator of the universe is not illusory; it is real and natural. It cannot be apprehended by the eye; but could be apprehended through the mind, which must be free from impurity, by one, who has resorted to a different means of attaining Him'. The scriptural text is this—'He is not apprehended by the eye, nor by speech'; 'but can be known only by a pure mind' (Muṇḍa. III-1-8). It is not taught that gods, who have no real form, have a form; because the scripture describes things as they are. This is also because in a different context, it is stated about the Universal witness thus—'The form of this person is like a saffron coloured robe' (Bṛ. II-3-6) 'I know this great Person of sun-like lustre' (Tait-Ār. III-12-7). This passage also is found in the work Vākya. The phrase He is the Golden Person is to be explained on the similarity of colour of both, like in the case of the expression 'moon-face'. Dramiḍa himself, has commented upon the passage thus—'The affix, mayaṭ, is not used in the sense of modification; because the Self is not produced'. Thus the Vedānta texts determine the Brahman, who is other than the Pradhāna and the individual self. He has unlimited omniscience (Vipaścittva), whose natural characteristic is unsurpassed bliss, who possesses a divine form that is peculiar to Him, and not made of matter He is the Highest Person and the cause of the world. Thus there is not any defect.

The scriptural text, 'He who dwelling in the sun, is within the sun, whom the sun does not know, whose body is the sun, who internally rules the sun—He is thy Self, internal ruler and immortal,' (Mādh. Bṛh. III-7-9) proves that He is greater than the gods. That He is above the individual self is stated in the scriptural text, 'He who dwelling in the individual self etc.' That, He is above the world, is stated in the scriptural text, 'He, who dwelling within all the worlds, etc.' The scriptural text, 'He, who dwelling within all beings' proves that He is greater than all beings. That He is above all the Vedās is stated in the scriptural text, 'He, who dwelling within all the Vedās, etc.' That He is above all sacrifices is stated in the text, 'He, who dwelling within all the sacrifices.' All these texts are found in Antaryāmi-brāhmaṇa. The Subālopaniṣad passage, beginning with 'who is moving within the earth' and proceeding 'who is moving within Ayakta, who is moving within Akṣara (imperishable), who is moving within Mṛtyu (death), whose body is Mṛtyu, whom Mṛtyu does not know. This is the Internal Self of all beings. This is free from all sins. He is the Divine Lord, He is the one Nārāyaṇa' (Subā. VII-1) points out that He is above all gods, all worlds, all beings, all Vedās, all sacrifices, and all souls. He possesses them as His body. He is their Inner-Self. He is not apprehended by them. He is their controller. Thus he is described as different from all these. Hence it is proved, that Nārāyaṇa, who is free from all sins, and who is other than the Pradhāna and the individual selves, is the sole cause of the world.

Consider the texts, 'All these beings are, indeed, born out of the Ākāśa; they go unto the Ākāśa at the end'. (Chānd. I-9-1). 'All these beings, indeed, enter into the Prāṇa and are evolved out of the Prāṇa' (Chānd. I-11-5).

The doubt, that arises here, is this:—These passages distinctly specify with the terms Ākāśa and Prāṇa, the universal cause mentioned in the text 'Existence alone, my dear boy, was in the beginning' with general term Sat. Here the terms Ākāśa and Prāṇa denote the popular ether (one of the five elements) and Jiva functioning with co-operation of vital breath of air. The doubt is cleared thus—In the texts quoted above the words Ha vai (indeed) point out that the reason for accepting the object as the universal cause is well-known. Therefore the cause denoted by the terms Ākāśa and Prāṇa must be the Highest Person who is distinct from the popular ether and vital air. Here what is well known is this—The Highest Person is the cause of the world. He became many as a result of His will. He possesses unsurpassed bliss. He grants bliss to the self.

the things, on the backs of everything, in the highest worlds than which there is no higher, that is that same as this light, indeed, which is here within the Person (Chānd. III-13-7). Here the following doubt arises—The word, Jyotis (light), is to be taken as the cause of the creation, etc. of the world; because it is denoted as Higher than all objects. It is also taught to be the same as digestive heat in the stomach. In this passage nothing is seen to prove contradiction with the supposition. Therefore, the popular Jyotis (light), alone is to be taken as the cause of the creation, etc. of the world.

If it be so doubted, the reply is this—It is true that in this passage nothing is seen to prove contradiction with the supposition. Yet, in the same context, the passage—'All beings make up His one foot; His three feet represent the immortal beings in the Highest Heaven' (Chānd. III-12-6) occurs wherein all beings are declared to form the foot of this Highest Person who is in relation to the

And, in the teaching that this Jyotis is one with the digestive heat of the stomach, there is nothing wrong; because the oneness is enjoined for the purpose of meditation for attaining the desired result. The Highest Person is the only cause of the world. He possesses an extraordinary devine colour, that is peculiar to Him and not a modification of the Prakṛti. He possesses a divine form. He is beyond darkness (i.e. Prākṛta world). He has unsurpassed lustre. Hence it is right to say that He who is denoted by the word Jyotis, lives on the back of all the worlds, on the back of everything and also in all the higher worlds than which there is no higher.

26. Chandobhidhānānneti cenna tathā cetorpaṇanigamāt; tathāhi darśanam

If it be said that on account of the metre (Gāyatrī) being mentioned (in the context, the light or Jyotis mentioned above is) not the Brahman; it is not right to say so; because the teaching here relates to the concentration of the mind on the Brahman conceived as that same Gāyatrī; indeed the scripture declares it accordingly.

In a former passage in the same context, the metre known as the Gāyatrī is mentioned in the statement 'The Gāyatrī,[3] indeed, is all this' (Chānd. III-12-1). Therefore the Highest Person should not be taken to have been meant in the passages quoted above. To this question we say—This is not so. It is taught there that the Highest Person is to be meditated upon as similar to Gāyatrī. The conclusion is that it is impossible for that which is merely a metre to be in the form of all beings. Elsewhere, also a word, which ordinarily denotes a metre, is used to denote other thing in consequence of its similarity with it. Vide the passage beginning with—'Now these five and the other five' and ending with 'this same is virāj' (Chānd. IV-3-8).

The declaration that it has four feet namely the beings, the earth, the body and the heart is appropriate only in relation to the Highest Person who is here denoted by the word, Gāyatrī. Therefore the above mentioned interpretation alone is right.

If it be said that, on account of there being a difference between the teachings (given in the context, what is denoted by the word Jyotis) is not the Brahman; it cannot be right to say so; because even in both those teachings there is nothing that is contradictory of each other.

In a former passage in the same context, namely, 'His three immortal feet are in the Highest Heaven' (Chānd. III-12-6), the Highest Person has been pointed out clearly. Here in the scriptural text, 'That jyotis which is beyond the Highest Heaven' (Chānd. III-13-7), what is denoted by the oblative case is the light that is related to the Highest Heaven. Hence what is described in the former passage cannot be recognised in this subsequent passage. It is not so; because there is nothing contradicory in the two statements. For an analogous example there is this instance—'The hawk is on the top of the tree' and 'The hawk is above the top of the tree'. Therefore the purport in both the passages is that He is beyond the Highest Heaven.

INDRAPRĀṆĀDHIKARAṆA 11

29. Prāṇastathānugamāt

That which is denoted by the word Prāṇa (is the Brahman); because it is undetstood in the context.

The scriptural text is this:—'Indeed, I am the Prāṇa and the omniscient self; worship and meditate on me as life and immortality" (Kauṣ. III-2). The doubt that arises here is this—The above mentioned text teaches that Indra who is known as Jīva (individual soul), is the object of man's meditation which would give him the Mokṣa, most beneficial one. He (Indra) alone is the cause of the world; because the meditation on universal cause alone is the means of Mokṣa. The scriptural text in support of this is this—

[1] स्वस्य M 2, 3. [2] जगत्कारणो A 1.

'So long as he is not freed from the body, so long there is delay; then he will reach the Brahman' (Chānd. VI-14-2).

To this doubt, the reply is this—This Being, who is denoted by the word, Indra mentioned in grammatical equation with the word Prāṇa is the Highest Self characterised above and other than the individual Self. Why? Because it is so understood in the sequal. The particular characteristics of the Highest Self, such as Ānanda (bliss), Ajara (undecaying) and Amṛta (immortal) are found in the Being, who is denoted by the words, Indra and Prāṇa. This is mentioned in the scriptural passage, 'That same Prāṇa is the omniscient self who is bliss, undecaying and immortal' (Kauṣ. III-9).

30. Na vakturātmopadesāditi cedadhyātmasaṁbhandhabhūmā hyasmin

If it be said that on account of the speaker Indra declaring himself (to be the sujbect of worship) what is denoted by the words, Indra and Prāṇa) is not (the Brahman; it is replied that it cannot be right to say so); because there is here the mention of a multitude of attributes belonging to the Self.

उपक्रमे "मामेव विजानीहि" इति त्वाष्ट्रवधादिना प्रज्ञातजीवभावस्येन्द्रस्योपदेशादुपसंहारस्तदनुगुणो वर्णनीय इति चेत्; नैतत्; अध्यात्मसंबन्धभूमा ह्यस्मिन्। अध्यात्मम्; परमात्मधर्मः। परमात्मसंबन्धबहुत्वमस्मिन्निन्द्रशब्दाभिधेये वाक्योपक्रमप्रभृत्योपसंहाराद् दृश्यते "यं त्वं मनुष्याय हिततमं मन्यसे" इति हिततमोपासनं प्रारब्धम्। तच्च परमात्मधर्मः। "तमेवं विद्वानमृत इह भवति। नान्यः पन्थाः" इत्यादिश्रुतेः। तथा "एष एव साधु कर्म कारयति" इत्यादिना सर्वस्य कारयितृत्वम्,

In the beginning of the topic there is the statement, 'Know me alone' (Kauṣ. III-1). Here Īndra is denoted as an individual self; because there are statements of attributes such as killing Vṛtra, etc.' The conclusion should also be in consonance with this statement. This is not so; because there is in the context the mention of a multitude of attributes belonging to the Self. The phrase 'the attributes belonging to the self' means the attributes of the Highest Self'. From the beginning to the end of the sentence, it is seen that he who is denoted by the word, Indra, possesses many attributes belonging to the Highest self. The scriptural statements made in the outset, namely, 'You yourself choose for me that boon, which you think most beneficial to man' (Kauṣ. III-1) starts with the worship, that is most beneficial to man. That this worship is of the Highest Self is proved in the text, 'Thus knowing Him one becomes immortal here. There is no other path" (Puruṣa Sūkta 20). Similarly, the Supreme Self is the impeller of all activities, in accordance with the passage—'He Himself induces him to do good work whom He wishes to lead beyond these worlds, etc." (Kauṣ. III-8). So also He is the support

31. Sāstradṛṣṭyā tūpadeso vāmadevavat

And the teaching in the context is, in accordance with the view found in the scripture, as in the case of Vāmadeva.

All the words denote the Highest Self; because the scriptures state that He transforms Himself into a gross being having name and form. In order to make one remember this, the Highest Self is mentioned here by the word, Indra. Vāmadeva and others whe realised this truth of the scriptures state accordingly. Vide 'After seeing this, the sage Vāmadeva experienced—I have become Manu and the sun etc.' (Bṛh. 32. Jīvamukhyaprāṇaliṅgānneti cennopāsā-traividhyādāśritatvādiha tadyogāt

If it be said, that on account of the characteristics of the individual self and of the principal vital air being mentioned in the context, there is no reference to the Brahman here at all, it is replied that it cannot be (right to say) so; because the worship of the Brahman has a three-fold nature; because this three-fold nature of His worship is taken for granted; and because here (i.e. in the present context also) that (same kind of worship) may be appropriately referred to.

The characteristics of the individual self are mentioned in the scriptural texts—' I killed the three-headed Tvāṣṭra.' (Kauṣ. III-1). In the same text are given the characteristics of the vital wind 'As long as the Prāṇa dwells in this body, so long surely there is life' (Kauṣ. III-2). Therefore it is presumed that the Brahman is not meant here. It is not so. The words referring to the individual self and Prāna denote the Highest Self; because the worship of the Brahman has a three-fold nature. In another context also it is meant to serve the object of teaching of the three kinds of meditation in relation to the Highest Self, namely, the meditation of the Highest Self in His own essential nature, in His having the enjoyers or the individual selves for His body and having the enjoyable things and the auxiliary things of enjoyment for His body. In the following passage, namely, 'The Brahman is True, Knowledge and Infinite' (Tait. II-1), the meditation of the Brahman in His own essential nature is taken for granted. In the following passages, 'Having entered it, He became the Sat and the tyat' and 'while being the unchangeable one (Satya) and the changeable one, He has nevertheless remained true to His own nature' (Tait. II-6), the meditation of the Highest Self as having the enjoyers for His body and also as having the enjoyable things and the auxiliaries of enjoyment for His body is taken for granted. In the present context also, this three-fold meditation of the Highest Self is mentioned as it is appropriate. In the Sūtra I-1-2, the cause of the world, that is denoted by the words, Existence, Brahman and the Self is proved to be the Person other than the individual selves and Prakṛti. In the Sūtra I-1-25, the cause of the world has been specifically determined to be the Highest Person

The word Brahman that occurs in grammatical equation with what is mentioned in the text 'All this is indeed' (Chānd. III. 14-1) refers to the Highest Self. Why? Because in that Upanishat is taught that which is well-known. That all this is the Brahman is proved by the reason stated in the scriptural text, 'From Him springs the world, in Him it merges and by Him it lives.' (Chānd. III-14-1). And on account of the authority of smṛti.

It is determined that the Highest Person is exhibited in the nominative case here; because the Smṛti reveals thus—'And I dwell within the hearts of all' (Bh. Gītā XV-15).

Should it be said that the passage does not refer to the Brahman on account of the smallness of the abode stated, and on account of denotation of that (i.e. minuteness of the being); we say no; because the Brahman has to be meditated upon thus, and because in the same passage He is said to be like ether.

The scriptural text, 'He is my Self within the heart and smaller than a grain of rice' (Chānd. III-14-3) declares the being as dwelling within the minute abode. He is also designated as having a minute size. Hence he is not the Highest one. It is not so. He has been so designated only

Should it be said that there is happening of fruition (of pleasure and pain in the Highest Person); we reply, not so, on account of distinction.

Suppose the Highest Person lives within the body of the individual selves; then He has to enjoy the fruits of pleasure and pain, as in the case of the individual selves. It is not so, because the difference of the cause of it. The Highest Person lives within the body of the individual selves, only on His own will in order to save them.

The eater (is the Highest Self); because (He) takes for food, all that is movable and immovable.

'Who really knows where He is, to whom both Brāhmaṇas[2] and Kṣattriyas[2] are food and death is a condiment.' (Kaṭh. I-2-25). Here the eater suggested by the words, food and condiment, is the Highest Self; because He is said to be the eater of all that is movable and immovable, implied by the words, the Brāhmaṇas and Kṣattriyas using the death as condiment.

There are scriptural texts—'The wise, who knows the Self, the Great and Omnipresent, does not grieve' (Kaṭh. I-2-22). 'This Self is not to be obtained by instruction' (Kaṭh. I-2-23). These passages refer to the Highest Person only according to the context and therefore He alone is meant here.

11. Guhāṁ praviṣṭāvātmānau hi taddarśanāt

The 'two entered into the cave' are the two selves on account of this being seen (in the scriptures).

In the scriptural passage 'The two, drinking the reward of the good action in the world, have entered the cave in the excellent and highest sphere,' (Kaṭh. I-3-1) are mentioned the individual self and the Supreme Self only as they are connected as an impeller and impelled, with the enjoyment of the reward of action, as they only are said to have entered the cave in this context. Of these, the Highest Self is referred to in the text 'Him, who is difficult to see, hidden, entered into the beings and set in the cave' (Kaṭh. I-2-12). The ndividual self is referred to in the text, 'Who is together

Everywhere in the context the distinctive qualities of the individual selves and the Highest Self are stated. The individual self is referred to in the scriptural text—'The wise one (Vipaścit) is not born nor dies' (Kaṭh. I-2-18).

The Highest Self is referred to in the following texts—

(1) 'He is more minute than the minute and more huge than the huge' (Kaṭh. I-2-20).

(2) 'The Great and All-pervading Soul' (Kaṭh. I-2-22).

The scriptural text, 'Pleasure is the Brahman. Ether is the Brahman' (Chānd. IV-10-5) refers only to what is characterised by Pleasure. Hence this must be the Highest Self.

16. Ata eva ca sa Brahma

For that very reason that (ether) is the Brahman.

Here Upakosala being afraid of Saṁsāra, made the inquiry about the Brahman. Then he was taught that the Pleasure was the Brahman and the Ether was the Brahman.

He is not the two others (i.e. the Pradhāna and the individual self); on account of (the mention of) particular attribute and the statement of difference.

He is not the Pradhāna, because of the particularisation of the character, namely the attainment of the knowledge of all through the knowledge of one. He is not the individual self, because of the difference mentioned in the text 'He is different from him (Jīva) who is different from Akṣara' (Muṇḍ. II-1-2). Here the word Akṣara means the Pradhāna. The individual self is different from the Pradhāna. The Brahman is different from the individual self. Or the scriptural text quoted above may be interpreted thus, taking the two words viz. Akṣarāt and Parataḥ in grammatical equation (Sāmānādhikaraṇya)—The Lord is different from the Akṣara, the 25th entity i.e. the individual self who is altogether distinct from the Pradhāna and its modifications.

The word, Vais'vānara, applies generally to the fire in the stomach etc. also; but in this context it refers to the Highest Self; because there is the mention of the peculiar characteristics of the Highest Self, namely, being the Self of all objects and denoted by the word Brahman.

(S'ata. Br. 10-6-1-11) Hence he is not the Highest Self. To this objection, this is answer. It is not so; because it is taught that He has to be meditated upon as having the fire of the stomach, as His body. Moreover the fire in the stomach cannot have the three worlds, as its body. The scriptural text of the Vājasaneyins, 'This is the Agni Vais'vānara same as the Puruṣa' (S'ata. Br. 10-6-1-11) teaches that the Vais'vānara is the Person. The word, Person, without any limiting conditions attached to it, applies only to the Lord Nārāyaṇa, the Highest Self. This is said clearly in the text, beginning with 'The thousand-headed God' and ending with, 'All this universe is the Person,' (Tait. II-II-1).

Jaimini opines that there is no inconsistency (because the word, Agni) directly (denotes the Highest Self).

It is not necessary to hold that the word 'Agni' is used here in the same grammatical equation with a view to teach that the Brahman should be meditated having the fire as His body. The word 'Agni' directly refers to the Highest Self, as He takes the foremost part among gods. Therefore, Ācārya Jaimini opines that nothing is contradicted here.

In the scriptural text, 'The chest is the sacrificial altar, the hairs are the Kuśa grass, the heart is the Gārhapatya fire' (Chānd. V-18-2), there is the imaginative identification of the heart etc. of the devotee with the sacrificial altar etc. So that the Prāṇāhuti (oblation to Prāṇa) which forms a helpful part of the Vidyā (meditation) may serve the purpose of Agnihotra. This is the opinion of Jaimini. The scriptural text in support of this view is this:—'He who offers the Agnihotra knowing it thus' (Chānd. V-24-2). These views are acceptable. The names of Ācāryas are mentioned as a mark of respect.

Moreover, they record Him in this.

They recite the following scriptural text, Viz. 'The brightly shining heaven is the head of the Self' (Chānd. V-18-2) and opine that the Highest Self should be meditated in the body of the devotee at the time of Prāṇāhuti (the offering of the oblation to Prāṇa). The conclusion is that the head etc. of the devotee is the head etc. of the Highest Self.

DYUBHVĀDYADHIKARAṆA 1

1. Dhyubhvādyāyatanaṁ Svaśabdāt

The abode of heaven, earth etc. (is the Highest Self), on account of (the use of) the term that refers to Him.

In the Scriptural text—'In whom the heaven, the earth and the sky are woven' (Muṇḍ. II-2-5), it is stated that He is the abode or support of heaven, etc. Here the Highest Self is so meant, because in the same text the word, Ātman (Self) is used viz.—'Know Him alone as the one Self' (Muṇḍ. II-2-5). The aspect of being the Self without any condition, has to be applied only to the Highest-Person. This fact has been supported by the scriptural text 'He is the Setu (bridge) to Immortality' (Muṇḍ. II-2-5). The scriptural text, 'Becoming many' (Muṇḍ. II-2-6) does not exclude Him as possessing the characteristics of the Highest Self. The S'ruti passage 'Though unborn, He is born as many' (Tait. Ār. III-13-1) teaches that He is not born due to His past actions; but He is born as and when He desires, on account of the love that He bears towards His dependants.

2. Muktopasṛpyavyapades'ācca

And on account of His being declared that to Him the released souls have to resort.

'Then, the knower shaking off good and evil and free from stains, attains the highest equality' (Muṇḍ. III-1-3). 'So the knower being freed from name and form, goes to the Heavenly Person, who is higher than the high' (Muṇḍ. III-2-8). Here it is declared that He is to be attained by those, who are freed from good and evil as well as name and form. Hence the Highest Person is to be taken as referred to here.

It is not the Ānumāna (Pradhāna), on account of absence of words denoting it; and so also it is not the bearer of the Prāṇas (i.e. the individual self).

The meaning is this :—' Just as this is not the Pradhāna, because there are no words in the context to indicate it, so also this is not the bearer of the Prāṇas (i.e. the individual self).

4. Bhedavyapadeśāt

On account of the declaration of difference.

The Highest Person is meant here, because He is mentioned as different from the individual self. This is proved in the text, 'The individual self being influenced by the impotent Prakṛti, becomes ignorant and feels sorry. When he sees the other, the Lord, pleased well and His greatness then becomes relieved from grief,' (Muṇḍ. III-1-2).

And on account of abiding and eating.

'One of them eats the sweet Pippala fruit, while the other shines without eating' (Muṇḍ. III-1-1.) In this scriptural text it is stated that the individual self enjoys the fruits of his actions, and the other shines in splendour without eating. Hence, the Highest Self is referred to in the context.

BHŪMĀDHIKARAṆA 2

7. Bhūmā saṁprasādādadhyupadeśāt

The Bhūman (is the Highest Self) as the instruction about Him is on His superiority than the individual self.

"सुखं त्वेव विजिज्ञासितव्यम्" "भूमैव सुखम्" इत्युक्त्वा भूम्नः स्वरूपमाह—"यत्र नान्यत्पश्यति नान्यच्छृणोति नान्यद्विजानाति स भूमा" इति। यस्मिन् सुखेऽनुभूयमाने तद्व्यतिरिक्तं किमपि सुखत्वेन न पश्यति, न शृणोति, न विजानाति, स भूमेत्युच्यते; "अथ यत्रान्यत्पश्यत्यन्यच्छृणोत्यन्यद्विजानाति तदल्पम्" इति वचनात्॥

इति। "एष तु वा अतिवदति यः सत्येनातिवदति" इति प्रस्तुतं चाति-

The scriptures state—'The pleasure alone is to be inquired into' (Chānd. VII-22). 'The Bhūman alone is pleasure' (Chānd. VII-23). Then it narrates the nature of the Bhūman thus 'Where one sees nothing else, hears nothing else, knows nothing else, that is the Bhūman' (Chānd. VII-24). That is called Bhūman, while experiencing which pleasure one does not see anything else as pleasure, does not hear anything else as pleasure and does not know anything else as pleasure; because there is the scriptural text, 'But where one sees something else, hears something else, knows something else, that is the little' (Chānd. VII-24). In the Mahā-Bhārata it is stated thus —'The celestial heavenly chariots moving unrestrained, halls, the pleasure grove of various kinds and the lotus-pools of crystal water—All these, Oh dear, are hells when compared with that abode of the Highest Self' (S'ā. 196-4). 'But he is Ativādin who makes a supreme declaration by the means of the Truth' (Chānd. III-16). The fact that he is Ativâdin could be reasonably maintained only on the acceptance of this fact. The Ativādin (i.e. one, who speaks on High) is one, who is the object of his devotion, speaks of it as highly beneficial to man. The word Bhūman, that is the counter term of the 'little' speaks of the abundance of pleasure, possessed by Him as stated above. What is denoted by the word Bhūman, is the Highest Self; because the Bhūman is said greater than the individual self. The word, Saṁprasāda occuring in the Sūtra means the individual self. The scriptural text is this—'Then this is the (Saṁprasāda) individual self' (Chānd. VIII-3-4). Consider the text, 'But he is an Ativādin, who makes a supreme declaration by means of the Truth' (Chānd. III-16). What is taught here is the Person, who is different from and higher than the individual self, who is denoted by the word Prāṇa.

'Oh Blessed Sir, In whom does He rest? He rests in His own greatness' (Chānd. VII-24). From the above mentioned and other scriptures, the attributes, such as (1) resting in His own greatness (2) being the cause of the creation, etc. of the universe and (3) being the Self of all objects, are ascertained as belonging to the Highest Person. Hence the word Bhūman, refers to the Highest Person.

AKṢARĀDHIKARAṆA 3

9. Akṣaramambarāntadhṛteḥ

The Indestructible (is the Brahman), on account of His supporting that which is the end of Ambara (ether).

The scriptural text says thus—'O Gārgi, Brāhmaṇas call that Indestructible (Akṣara). It is not gross, not of atomic size' (Bṛh. 3-8-8). Here what is denoted by the term 'Indestructible' is the Highest Brahman, because He is said to be the support of that which is the end (or the place of merging) of ether. The scriptural passage beginning with 'O Gārgi, which is above the sky' (Bṛh. 3-8-7) mentions the Ākāśa as the support of all changable things. It is again questioned 'In whome is this Ākāśa woven crosswise and lengthwise?' (Bṛh. 3-8-7). In answering the above question the text 'This is the Indestructible (Akṣara)' (Bṛh. 3-8-8) says that the Akṣara is the support of that which is the end of Ambara (ether) contained with wind. The purport of the whole topic is this. The Ākāśa which is said to be the support of all changable things is identical with the Pradhāna or Avyakta, the primitive cause and merging place of Ambara (the ether) pregnant with wind. The Akṣara (Indestructible one) which is said to be the support of the Pradhāna is the Supreme Brahman.

10. Sā ca praśāsanāt

And this (supporting springs) from command.

Such kind of support is said to have sprung from the supreme command, in the text, 'Oh! Gārgi! In the supreme command of the Indestructible, etc.' (Bṛh. 3-8-9). Hence this Indestructible cannot be the individual self as well.

In the subsequent passage it is stated thus—'The wise, by the means of the syllable Om, reaches Him who is calm, not aged immortal and fearless' (Pras'. V-7). Here are mentioned the attributes, that are peculiar to the Highest Self. It is also because in the scriptural text, 'The wise sages know that' (Pras'. V-7), it has been pointed out that the sages see His place of resort, (i.e. Heaven).

The subtle (ether) is the Brahman, on account of the subsequent statements.

VIII-1-1). mentions the subtle ether. This subtle ether is the Highest Self, on account of the special attributes subsequently mentioned. In the subsequent passage, the subtle ether is said to be the support of all the worlds and hence to be of huge size. It is also subsequently said that the city mentioned above is identical with the Brahman who is Truth and that in the subtle ether which is Brahman-city there are several desires (desirable attributes). Then there are inquiries as to what is this subtle ether and what are those desirable attributes. Then the following passage in answer begins with 'That is the Self, free from evil' and ends with 'whose wishes and purposes come true' (Chānd. 8-1-5). Here the subtle ether is the Highest Self. The desirable attributes are His freedom from evil etc. In the passage 'Within that is a small space. What is within that, should be searched for' (Chānd. 8-1-1) the subtle ether and the contents thereof are clearly mentioned to be searched for. This fact has been clearly indicated in the scriptural text 'Those who reach the Highest Place by meditating upon Him and His true qualities' (Chānd. 8-1-6).

'Just so, all these people go to this Brahman-world everyday, but they do not know Him' (Chānd. VIII-3-2). This scriptural text says that every day all the people not knowing Him, move above the subtle ether i.e. they rest on Him. The word, Brahma-loka is used in the same grammatical equation with the Ākāśa of the subtle form. The above mentioned two facts help in determining that the subtle ether mentioned here, refers to the Highest Brahman. In the following scriptural statements also it is seen that all people take rest on the Highest Self. 'All these worlds take rest on Him' (Kaṭh. II-6-1). 'The people take rest on the Highest Indestructible' (Taiṭ. II-1-3). The word 'Brahma-loka' is used to mean the Highest Person in the scriptural passage 'This is Brahma-loka' (Bṛh. IV-3-33). We need not go for any other external reference to prove this fact;

these above mentioned evidences alone namely that all people rest on the the subtle ether and the usage of the word Brahma-loka will suffice to prove it.

15. Dhṛteśca mahimnosyāsminnupalabdheḥ

And on account of the fact that the qualities supporting etc. that determine the greatness of the Brahman, are perceived in It.

That He is the support of the world is proved in scriptural text, 'Now, He, who is the Self, is the bank, a limitiary support' (Chānd. VIII-4-1). In this Ākāśa of a subtle form, are perceived the qualities that determine the greatness of the Highest Self, the support of the world. The qualities that determine the greatness of the Highest Self, are stated in the scriptural text, 'He is the bank and support etc' (Bṛh. IV-4-22).

16. Prasiddheśca

And on account of its meaning being established (in the scriptural texts).

The word, Ākās'a, has been determined to mean the Highest Self in the scriptural text, 'This Ākās'a who is the Bliss etc.' (Tait. I-7-1). Hence it refers to the Highest Self. Therefore the word Ākās'a is more familiar in denoting the Highest Self endowed with the qualites such as true will etc. than the ether.

17. Itaraparāmars'āt sa iti cennāsaṁbhavāt

If it be said that on account of the reference to the other one, he (i.e. the individual self) is meant, we say in answer—No, on account of impossibility.

If it be said—The individual self is referred to in the scriptural text, 'Now, he the Saṁprasāda (i.e. the individual self)' (Chānd. VIII-3-4) and hence, this word Ākās'a, refers to the individual self; it is not so. The qualities mentioned therein are impossible in the individual self.

18. Uttarāccedāvirbhūtasvarūpastu

If it be said that from a subsequent passage (it appears that the individual self is meant); rather (the self) in so far as his true nature has become manifest,

अन्यार्थश्च परामर्शः॥ १९॥

In a subsequent passage, occurs the statement, 'This self free from evil' (Chānd. VIII-7-1). This passage refers to the indivudal self. Hence, impossibility of any kind does not here arise. Certainly, what is referred to in the context is the individual self, as he undergoes the states of wakefulness, dream, and deep sleep etc. It is not so. The statement relates to the individual self of whom the true nature has become manifest. The qualities, such as 'freedom from evil, etc.' are concealed by the association of the bodies, that are the products of Karman (past actions). When subsequently they (i.e. the released souls) reach the Highest Light, then, their true nature manifest themselves and they possess the qualities, such as, 'freedom from evil etc.' Such an individual self is mentioned in the text mentioned above. But the Ākās'a of the subtle form is mentioned as an ocean of many auspicious qualities, that could not be ever hidden. Hence, the word, Ākās'a, does not refer to the individual self.

19. Anyārthas'ca parāmars'aḥ

And what is referred to (here) has a different purpose.

The above mentioned text states that the individual self regains his own nature when he reaches the Daharākāśa (the subtle ether). Thus the text refers to the Jīva, only for the purpose of explaining the power of the Highest Self in granting the individual self his essential nature.

20. Alpaśruteriti cet taduktam

If it be said that the scriptures declare that He is small ; this objection has been replied already.

This is not the Highest Self, because the scriptures state that He occupies a small place and that by nature He is very small. शब्दादेव प्रमितः ॥ २३ ॥

The individual self is said to imitate the Highest Light, who is the subtle Ākas'a (ether of the subtle kind). Therefore the individual self is not the Ākās'a of the subtle kind in question. Consider the scriptural text 'There he approaches Him eating, playing and rejoicing' (Chānd. VIII-12-3). It is stated here that, having approached Him, he imitates Him in acting as he desires.

22. Api smaryate

The same is declared by smṛti also.

It is stated in the Smṛti thus—' Those who, resort to this knowledge and attain the possession of qualities that characterise Me, are neither born at the time of creation, nor hurt at the time of dissolution ' (Bh. Gītā XIV-2).

PRAMITĀDHIKARAṆA 6

23. S'abdādeva pramitaḥ

The measured one is the Highest Self, because of the term itself.

'The person of the size of the thumb, stands in the middle of the self, as Lord of the past and the future' (Kaṭh. II-4-12). Here who is mentioned as measured by the size of the thumb, is the Highest Self, because of the use of the words, on His Lordship. 'The Lord of the past and the future'.

24. Hṛdyapekṣayā tu manuṣyādhikāratvāt

But the reference is to the heart, as the men are qualified (to meditate upon the Brahman.)

Even the Infinite One is mentioned as measured by the size of the thumb, because He remains in the heart of men, who meditate upon Him. Men alone are entitled to meditate upon Him. The scriptures are intended for men. Hence this is stated with reference to the heart of men. This topic will be finally concluded later on.

DEVATĀDHIKARAṆA 7

25. Taduparyapi Bādarāyaṇaḥ sambhavāt

Bādarāyaṇa thinks that, also those who are above men, meditate upon Him, because it is possible.

तद्ब्रह्मोपासनमुपरि देवादिष्वप्यस्ति, अर्थित्वसामर्थ्यसंभवादिति भगवान् बादरायणो मेने। संभवश्च पूर्वोपार्जितज्ञानाविस्मरणात्। मन्त्रार्थवादेषु विग्रहादिमत्तया स्तुतिदर्शनात्, तदुपपत्तये [1]तत्सद्भावात्तेषामेव प्रामाण्येन विग्रहादिमत्त्वाच्च ॥

The illustrious Bādarāyaṇa thinks thus—Even the gods, who are above men, meditate upon that Brahman, because they also are regarded as suppliants. Such a thing is possible for them, as they do not lose the memory of the knowledge, that they have acquired formerly. In the Mantras and Arthavādas of the Veda, the deities are praised as possessed with body. In order to justify the same, the existence of the body of gods should be accepted on the authority of the same Vedic passages.

26. Virodhaḥ karmaṇīti cennānekapratipatterdarśanāt

If it be said that it is opposed with reference to the ritual performances; we deny this, on account of the observation of the assumption of several bodies.

Suppose the gods have bodies. Then the individual god cannot be present at the same time in all places. Hence, there arises the contradiction as regards the ritual works. It is not so; because it is seen that Saubhari and others have assumed several bodies at the same time.

If it be said (that a contradiction will occur) with regard to the words (i.e. scriptural statements); we say no, since beings originate from them (as appears) from perception and inference.

A contradiction will occur in the scriptural statements. Because the bodies of Indra and other gods are effected with several parts, they are not permanent. The Vedic words denoting Indra, etc. are totally devoid of meaning during the periods, which preceed the origination of Indra etc. or follow on their destruction. And also the Veda itself will be non-eternal. It is not so. The gods Indra etc. are created by the creator with the guidance given by the Vedic words Indra etc. The words, Indra, etc. do not mean any particular individual. But, as in the case of the words cow etc., they represent a class and species that bear the same form. Suppose the previous Indra is destroyed, then the four-faced Brahman remembers the particular form of Indra, etc. of former time and then creates new Indra etc. of the same form, like a potter makes a new pot. Hence, no contradiction will occur. How is this known? (Reply)—Such a thing is known from the statements found in Vedic scriptures and Smṛtis. The Vedic scriptural authority is this—'The creator created the Sat and Asat (the existent and non-existent things) by the guidance of Veda' (Tait. Bṛ. II-6-2.) 'He said 'Bhūḥ.' Then he created the earth' (Tait. Bṛ. II-2-4). The Smṛti text is this—'In the beginning, he assigned the several names, actions and conditions, to all beings taking them from the words of the Veda' (Manu Smṛti I, 21) and so on.

28. Ata eva ca nityatvam

And for the same reason, the eternity of the Vedas is established.

The creator Brahman recollects the meaning of the words used in the Vedas. Then he creates the world. Visvāmitra and other sages are the composers of the Mantras as stated in the scriptural texts, 'He gratifies the composers of the Mantras', and 'This is the hymn of Visvāmitra'

(Tait. Saṁ. 5-2-3). Yet the Vedas, which are full of Mantras, etc. retain their eternity. He the creator remembers with the help of the words of the Vedās Visvāmitra and others of the former time, who are capable of repeating the Mantras without teaching. Then he creates the persons having the same name and ability, who could recite the same Mantras assigned to them. This happens after the Naimittika Pralaya. These persons reveal the very Mantras etc. without any fault. Thus it is established that the Vedas are eternal and that the various persons mentioned therein are the authors of the various Mantras.

How could then the eternity of the Vedās be established, when the Vedās and the creator are destroyed in the material deluge (i.e. Prākṛta Pralaya)? The Sūtrakāra answers this question thus:

29. Samānanāmarūpatvāccāvṛttāvapyavirodho darśanāt smṛteśca

And on account of the sameness of the names and forms (in each creation of the world), no contradiction arises even in the subsequent creation; as it appears from Sruti and Smṛti texts.

The world, that is going to be created, will have the same name and form as it had formely. Hence, no contradiction arises, even if the material deluge does take place frequently. The Highest Person, who is the first creator of the world, recollects the form of the world, as it was before the deluge. Then He creates the world of the same form. Then He hands over to the creator the Vedas, which he remembers in the same order as it was before. It is known from S'ruti and Smṛti passages that the first creator created the world in the same form as it was before. The S'ruti passages are these—'The creator Brahman created the sun and the moon as they were before' (Tait. II-1-38). 'He who created the creator in olden time and gave the Vedas to Him' (S'vet. VI-18).

The Smṛti passage is this:—'As in each rotation, the various signs of the seasons are seen very same, so also is the case with various things in each Yuga'[1], etc. (Viṣṇu I-5-65).

[1] Yuga means the age of the world. They are four—Kṛta, Tretā, Dvāpara, and Kali; the duration of each is said to be respectively, 1,728,000, 1,296,000, 864,000, and 432,000 years of men. They together constitute a Mahāyuga.

30. Madhvādiṣvasaṁbhavādanadhikāraṁ Gaiminiḥ

Jaimini maintains that Vasu and other divine beings are not entitled to practise Madhu and other meditations (Vidyās) on account of the impossibility.

In the Madhu and other meditations, Vasu and other gods are to be meditated and they have to be attained, by resorting to those meditations. These gods cannot practise these meditations; because they cannot play at the same time the role of the agent and the object of the same meditation. More over Vasus cannot be the object of desire; because they are Vasus already. Therefore Jaimini maintains that, as they have not the necessary qualifications, they cannot resort to Madhuvidyā etc.

This passage refers to the meditation on the Highest Light by the gods. The meditation is already known as common to the gods and men. Yet this special reference indicates that the gods are entitled to do this particular meditation only and not other meditations involving Vasu and other gods as the object.

32. Bhāvaṁ tu Bādarāyaṇostihi

Bādarāyaṇa opines that (these qualifications) exist; for there is possibility (of such a contingency).

meditate upon the Brahman in their own form so that they may in future ages also hold the same position of their being Vasu. That the sun is the cause of the creation, etc. of the world is stated in the scriptural text, 'He stands in the middle alone' (Chānd. III-11-1). That the Madhuvidyā represents the knowledge of the Brahman is stated in the same context of the scriptural text, 'He, who knows thus this Brahmopaniṣad' (Chānd. III-11-3). Therefore, what is to be meditated upon there, is the Brahman in both the states of cause and effect. क्षत्रियत्वगतेश्च॥ ३४॥

The preceptor calls the disciple as 'S'ūdra' at the time of imparting the knowledge of the Brahman as seen in the scriptural text, 'You have brought these, Oh S'ūdra' (Chānd. IV-2-5). It is here indicated that grief arose in the disciple, as he did not possess the knowledge of the Brahman. The word, 'S'ūdra' etymologically means, 'one who grieves'. It does not mean him who belongs to the S'ūdra caste. Why? It is because of hearing a disrespectful speech. The phrase, 'on hearing a disrespectful speech about himself' means—on account of hearing a disrespectful speech about himself, who did not possess the knowledge of the Brahman. In consequence of that, he approached the preceptor. The word, 'hi' used here refers to the cause that led Jānas'ruti to approach the preceptor. He was called S'ūdra, not on account his being born in that community. Therefore, it becomes clear that those, who are born in S'ūdra caste, are not entitled to practise the Brahmavidyā.

34. Kṣatriyatvagates'ca

And on account of Jānas'ruti's Kṣatriya-hood being recognised.

शुश्रूषोः क्षत्रियत्वावगतेश्च न जातियोगेन शूद्रेत्यामन्त्रणम्। उपक्रमे "बहुदायी" इत्यादिना दानपतित्वबहुपकान्नदायित्वबहुग्रामप्रदानैरस्य हि[1]क्षत्रियत्वं गम्यते ॥

Because the disciple was recognized to be a Kṣatriya, he was not addressed as a member of the S'ūdra community. In the beginning of the scriptural text, it is stated that he was the donor of many valuable things. Thus it becomes clear that he was a Kṣatriya; because he made gift of many things, plentiful cooked rice and many villages.

35. Uttaratra caitrarathena liṅgāt

And on account of the inferential sign (occurring in the subsequent passage), namely, 'along with Caitraratha'.

Regarding this Saṁvargavidyā in a later passage it is seen that this Vidyā should be resorted to by Brāhmaṇas and Kṣatriyas only. The scriptural text is this, 'Then S'aunaka Kāpeya and Abhipratārin etc.' (Chānd. IV-3-5). Now Abhipratārin is Caitraratha and a Kṣatriya. That Abhipratārin was Caitraratha and also a Kṣatriya is made known by that word being placed in juxtaposition with Kāpeya. In a different context, the characteristics Br.* II-12-5). 'From him there was born the Caitraratha of Kṣatriya caste'. (S'at. Br. II-5-3-13.) Therefore this disciple does not belong to the fourth caste.

On account of the reference to the ceremonial purifications and on account of the declaration of their absence.

In the beginning of the Ṣaṁvargavidyā, it is stated thus, 'I will initiate you' (Chānd. IV-4-5). Here the ceremony of initiation called Upanayana is referred to. S'ūdra is not entitled to practise the Brahmavidyā or meditation on the Brahman, as there is declared the prohibition of such ceremony in his case. That he is excluded from the initiation of such ceremony is stated in Manu X-126 thus, 'In S'ūdra there is not any sin, and he is not fit for any ceremony

The whole world including Agni, Vāyu, Sūrya, Indra and so on, trembles from great fear of Him, who is of the size of the thumb and who is denoted by the word, Prāṇa, as if the weapon Vajra is raised against it. Therefore the Person of the size of the thumb is determined to be the Highest Person.

41. Jyotirdarśanāt

On account of the brilliance being seen (used in the text).

The same context begins with, 'The sun does not shine there' and ends with, 'By his brilliance all this shines'. (Kaṭh. II-2-15). Here what is denoted by the word, brilliance is the unsurpassable Light. Hence, the Person of the size of the thumb is the Highest Self.

This Ākāśa is the Highest Person, who is other than the pure self mentioned in the context, by the scriptural text, 'Having shaken off the body,' (Chānd. VIII-13-1) It is because He is designated as the evolver of names and forms and unconnected with them. He is also mentioned as endowed with the above-said attributes and immortality.

There is the teaching, 'That thou art' (Chānd. VI-8-7). Hence the individual self is not different from the Highest Self. This doubt is removed thus—

On account of differences in deep sleep and departing.

'Embraced by the intelligent Self, he knows nothing that is without or within' (Bṛh. IV-3-21). 'Mounted by the intelligent Self' (Bṛh. IV-3-35). Thus it is seen that in the states of deep sleep and departing, the individual self is ignorant of the external and internal world. But here the distinction manifests itself because the Highest Self is said to be intelligent. Hence this Highest Self is different from the individual self.

44. Patyādiśabdebhyaḥ

And on account of the use of the words, 'Lord' and so on.

The embracing intelligent Self is designated upon by the terms, Lord, etc. Hence He is other than the individual self. Subsequently this scriptural text occurs, 'He is the Lord of all, the overlord of all and the Ruler of all', (Bṛh. IV-4-22). The doubt about the identity of the individual self with the Brahman will be set aside in the Sūtra I-4-22 explaining the oneness due to the fact that He is the Self of these individual selves that are His body.

THUS ENDS THE 3RD PĀDA OF THE 1ST ADHYĀYA.

ĀNUMĀNIKĀDHIKARAṆA 1

1. Ānumānikamapyekeṣāmiti cenna, śarīrarūpaka-vinyastagṛhīterdarśayati ca

If it be said that some (mention) that which is proved by inference (as the cause of the creation etc. of the world); we deny this, because (there is mention of the body in metaphor) and (the text) shows this.

In the scriptural text belonging to some of the Vedic seers (i.e. Kaṭhas) the Pradhāna, that could be proved by inference, is stated to be the cause of the world. The text is this—'Beyond Mahat is the Avyakta (or unmanifest Prakṛti' (Kaṭh. I-3-11). It is not so. The scriptural text, रथिनं विद्धि" इत्यादिषूपासनोपायेषु वशीकार्यत्वाय रथिरथादिरूपकविन्यस्तेषु शरीराख्यरूपकविन्यस्तस्यात्राव्यक्तशब्देन गृहीतेः । "इन्द्रियेभ्यः परा ह्यर्थाः" इत्यादिना हि वशीकार्यत्वे परा उच्यन्ते । तथाचोत्तरत्र श्रुतिरेव दर्शयति—"यच्छेद्वाङ्मनसी प्राज्ञः" इत्यादिना ॥

यदि रूपकविन्यस्तानामेव ग्रहणं, किमर्थम् "अव्यक्तात्पुरुषः परः" इति ? अत आह—

'Know the self as riding in a chariot' (Kaṭh. I-3-3) mentions in a metaphorical sense, the various means of meditation as the chariot-rider, chariot etc. in order to teach their control. There the body which is mentioned as chariot should be taken as meant by the word Avyakta. Consider the text, 'Higher than the senses are their objects etc.' (Kaṭh. I-3-10). Here the objects are mentioned as higher in the matter of control. The subsequent passage, viz. 'The intelligent should supprss his speech and mind' (Kaṭh. I-3-13) teaches the same thing.

2. Sūkṣmaṁ tu tadarhatvāt

But the subtle is the body; on account of its capacity.

The Avyakta (i.e. the unevolved Prakṛti), that is of subtle state, assumes the state of the body, and is capable of entering into activities. Therefore the word, Avyakta, denotes the body.

If the things that are mentioned metaphorically are meant here, then why is it stated thus, 'Higher than the Avyakta is the Person' (Kaṭh. I-3-11) ? The Sūtrakāra says in reply thus—

तदधीनत्वादर्थवत् ॥ ३ ॥

3. Tadadhīnatvādarthavat

Matter in its subtle state subserves an end, on account of its dependence on Him. (viz. the Supreme Person).

The individual selves and the body etc. are dependent on the Highest Person. Hence they serve the purpose of helping for the perfection of the meditation. Indeed the Highest Person, being Inner Ruler, directs all the individual selves, etc. for the meditation. Hence He is one of the means of the meditation and occupies the foremost place of those that must be brought under influence. He is also reachable by the meditators. The scripture states thus, 'He occupies the highest place. He is the Highest course' (Kaṭh. I-3-11).

4. Jñeyatvāvacanācca

And on account of the absence of statement of its being an object of knowledge.

There are no statements to prove that the Avyakta (i.e. unevolved Prakṛti) is an object of knowledge. Hence it cannot be the Avyakta of Kapila's School.

If it be said that the scriptural text beginning with 'It is without sound, without touch' and ending with 'knowing it.' (Kaṭh. I-3-15) declares that Avyakta is the object of knowledge, it is not so. The intelligent Self is referred to in the scriptural text 'Knowing Him' who is read in the context of the passage 'That Highest place of Viṣṇu' (Kaṭh. I-3-9). 'This Self is hidden in all beings and does not shine forth' (Kaṭh. I-3-12).

6. Trayāṇāmeva caivamupanyāsaḥ praśnaśca

The scriptural text 'The unborn one, red, white and black who produces many creatures' (S'vet. IV-5) does not state that the Prakṛti of the Sāṁkhyas is the cause of the creation, etc. of the world. It cannot be said, that on consideration of the derivative meaning, viz. the absence of birth, the Prakṛti alone is understood here, because in this context, the word Ajā has not been used in any particular sense, as in the case of the word Camasa used in the text, 'The Camasa with downward mouth' (Bṛh. II-2-3). Here the word Camasa, is used in a special sense. The scriptural text in support of this is this—'It is the head' (Bṛh. II-2-3). The apprehension of a particular thing by a derivative word is due to the mention of its qualifying attributes.

9. Jyotirupakramā tu tathāhyadhīyata eke

It (Prakṛti) has the light for its origin, for thus some read in their text.

The word 'light' means 'the Brahman'. That means that this Ajā (i.e. Prakṛti) has the Brahman for its origin.

The Taittirīyas read in their text that the Ajā had the Brahman for its cause. The text begins with 'smaller than the small, greater than the great, etc.' (Taiṭ. II-10-1) and ends with, 'From Him the seas and the mountains etc.' (Taiṭ. II-10-3). This proves that everything is born from the Brahman and has the Brahman for its self. In the context of the elucidation of this truth they read the text 'The unborn one etc.' (Taiṭ. II-10-5). Therefore it is decided that Brahman is the cause of the Prakṛti, because of the remembrance of the teaching mentioned above.

10. Kalpanopadeśācca madhvādivadavirodhaḥ

And on account of the teaching of the Kalpanā (i.e. creation), there is no contradiction as in the case of the Madhuvidyā.

'Kalpanā' means 'creation'. It is so stated in the scriptural text, 'The creator created the sun and the moon as they were before' (Taiṭ. II-1-38). The creation of the Prakṛti has been taught in the text, 'The Lord of wonderful power created this universe out of this' (S'vet. IV-9). being produced by the Brahman. The non-sentient beings, at the time of the deluge, give up name and form and remain as the body of the Brahman. They are called unborn in that stage. At the time of creation they take name and form and hence they are caused by the Brahman. Consider the following example—In the Madhuvidyā it is stated that the sun, at the time of creation, assumes the state of 'honey' and also the state of effect, as he becomes the seat of those objects, that are pleasing to the taste of Vasu, etc. At the time of deluge, he assumes a subtle form, that cannot be indicated as 'honey' and he does not assume the state of effect. The scriptural texts in support of this are—

(b) 'He does not rise, neither does He set. He remains alone in the middle' (Chānd. III-11-1).

'He, on whom the five Five-things etc.' (Bṛh. IV-4-17). Here it may be argued that the Prakṛti is meant, because there is a reference to its modification into twenty-five kinds; however the Prakṛti is not meant here. The words, 'On Him indicate that He is the support of that Prakṛti and is different from that Prakṛti. He belongs to a different category over and above the twenty-five categories. The objects denoted by the words, 'He' and 'Ākāśa' are different from the twenty-five varieties of Prakṛti. The word 'even' used in 'from the mention of the number even' indicates that the number twenty-five is not meant here. The word 'Pañcajana' denotes a class of things known by the name of Pañcajana. Pāṇini states—'The words denoting direction and number are compounded with nouns provided the compound-word denotes the name of a thing' (Pāṇini, II-1-50). This is similar to the statement, 'Seven seven-sages.'

12. Prāṇādayo vākyaśeṣāt

The word, Pañcajana, refers to the breath, etc. on the ground of the complementary passage.

पञ्चजनसंज्ञिताः प्राणादयः पञ्चेन्द्रियाणीति "प्राणस्य प्राणमुत चक्षुषश्चक्षुः" इत्यादिवाक्यशेषादवगम्यते । चक्षुःश्रोत्रसाहचर्यात्प्राणान्नशब्दावपि स्पर्शनादीन्द्रियविषयौ ॥

We see from a complementary passage, viz. 'They who know the breath of the breath, the eye of the eye, etc.' (Mādhyaṁdina-S'ākhā) that the five things are the breath, etc. Because they are used in juxtaposition with the words eye and the ear, the words 'breath' and 'the food' denote the organs of touch etc.

13. Jyotiṣaikeṣāmasatyanne

In the text of some, the word light (i.e. Jyotis) indicates the five sense-organs, even though the word, food is not (used in their text).

In the text of the Kāṇvās, the words, 'food of the food' are not used. But they begin with the statement, 'Him the gods worship as the light of the lights' (Bṛh. IV-4-16). Here the word, 'light' used in the context along with the five five-things refers to the sense-organs. The words 'The light of lights' mean the Brahman who is the Illuminuator of illuminators. Then the words, 'the five five-things' are introduced. Hence, by the word, 'Pañcajana' we understand the five organs.

In all the Vedānta passages the Pradhāna has not been declared to be the cause of ether, etc :—' Verily the Asat was in the beginning' (Tait. I-7-1). 'Then, indeed, this remained undifferentiated' (Bṛh. I-4-7). Here the special characteristics of the cause are not apprehended. But the special characteristics of the cause are apprehended in the scriptural text, 'The Self alone was in the beginning.' It thought, 'may I creat the worlds' (Ait. I-1). Hence it does not arise that Prakṛti etc. of the Sāṁkhya school, should be the cause of the creation.

The same word denoting the Brahman is brought down in interpreting the text 'Verily the Asat was in the beginning' (Taiṭ. I-7-1). Therefore He alone is meant here. In the same manner the text. 'Then, indeed, this remained Avyākṛta (Undifferentiated)' (Bṛh. I-4-7) mentioned the Brahman. The same word is brought down in interpreting the text 'He enteredin here, even to the fingernail-tips' (Bṛh. I-4-7) and 'He sees without eyes' (S'vet. III-19). The words Asat (non-existing) and Avyākṛta (Undifferentiated) have to be explained to mean Him, who has neither name nor form at the beginning.

who is the maker of these persons and to whom this work belongs, He, indeed, is to be known' (Kauṣ. III-26). Here the word, 'work' which is used in the same grammatical equation with the word, 'this' refers to the world, as it is said to be the product. Therefore what is taught here is that the Highest Brahman should be known.

17. Jīvamukhyaprāṇaliṅgānneti cet tadvyākhyātam

Should it be said that this is not so, on account of the distinguishing characteristics of the individual selves and of the Chief vital breath (i.e. Prāṇa) mentioned therein; we reply, that this has been explained before.

In the scriptural texts, 'He enjoys with the individual selves' (Kauṣ. III-44) and 'Then with this Prāṇa alone, he becomes one' (Kauṣ. III-39), the Highest is not referred to; because there are stated only the distinguishing characteristics of the individual selves and Prāṇa. This objection has already been answered in the chapter dealing with the Pratardanavidyā. In consideration of the context, it has

This statement is intended to teach that the Highest Self is other than the individual selves. This fact has been proved by the question and answer found in other scriptural text. The question is this—'Where, O Bālāki, did this person sleep?' (Kauṣ. III-35) The answer—'Then he becomes one with this Prāṇa'. (Kauṣ. III-39). This answer bears the same idea (Bṛh. II-4-2) and concluding with 'when the Self is seen, hearkened, thought on and understood, then all this is known' (Bṛh. IV-5-6) and 'By means of which one understands all this' (Bṛh. IV-5-15). All these sentences are with reference to the Highest Self.

In this context and also in other context the words denoting Jiva mean the Highest Self and are used in grammatical equation with the word denoting Him The Sūtrakāra gives the reason for this according to the different views in the following Sūtras—

20. Pratijñāsiddherliṅgamāśmarathyaḥ

It is a mark indicating that the proposition under discussion is proved. Thus Āśmarathya thinks.

The Highest Self is meant here, in order to establish the proposition, namely, 'All this will become known through the knowledge of the Highest Self' as stated in the

21. Utkramiṣyata evaṁbhāvādityauḍulomiḥ

Because the individual selves, when they depart, possess the characteristics of the Highest Self; thus Auḍulomi thinks.

Auḍulomi thinks that the word referring to the 'self' denotes 'the Highest Self'; because the Mukta (i.e. the released soul) possesses the characteristics of the Highest Self.

22. Avasthiteriti Kāśakṛtsnaḥ

On account of the Brahman's abiding within the individual self; thus Kāśakṛtsna thinks.

The teacher, Kāśakṛtsna, thinks that the Highest Self is the self of the individual selves as stated in the text—'He, who

The Brahman is the material cause also on account of this truth not being in conflict with the proposition under discussion and the illustrative example.

The Highest Brahman is also the material cause of the world. He is not the instrumental cause alone. The scriptural text says thus—' You are proud. Did you ever ask about the Ruler (i.e. Ādeśa) by hearing whom the unheard becomes heard?' (Chānd. VI-1-3). It means ' By the knowledge of Him, who is the Ruler, all this world of sentient and non-sentient beings become known.' The proposition is this—' All this will become known, if the Universal Ruler is known '. The illustrative example here is the clay. The above mentioned truth should be accepted so that the said proposition and the example may not be contradicted. The word Ādes'a used in the text denotes the Ruler; because it means Him by whom the world is ruled over. Thus the word, Ādes'a, means the Ruling Person. The scriptural text in support of this is thus—' O Gārgi, at the command of that imperishable etc.' (Bṛh. III-8-9).

24. Abhidhyopadeṣācca

Because also of the statement of His thought.

He thought ' may I become many ' (Chānd. VI-2-3). This scriptural text proves that the Person, who possesses the character of thinking and who is the instrumental cause, transformd Himself into the form of the world, consisting of various sentient and non-sentient beings through His will. Hence, it is known that He is the material cause also of the world.

This scriptural text shows that the Brahman is both the instrumental cause and the material cause of the world. This fact has been declared in distinct word in the scriptural text.

26. Ātmakṛteḥ

On account of the statements as regards the Self transforming.

The text, 'He desired' (Taiṭ. I-2-6-2) shows that He is the instrumental cause. Again the text 'That Self created Himself.' (Taiṭ. 1-2-7-1) shows that He made Himself in the form of the world. From these statements it is understood that the Highest Self is known to be both the instrumental cause and the material cause of the world.

The stainlessness and the true will are known to be characteristics of the Highest Self. He is again said to have created Himself into the form of the world, which is the seat of endless evils that are opposed to the above-mentioned characteristics and unfit to be the ambitions of men. How can this contradiction be averted? The author of the Sūtras answers this question thus—

27. Pariṇamāt

It is so owing to the modification.

No contradiction arises, as the scriptural text here teaches the modification. The Highest Person in the causal state has as His body the sentient and non-sentient beings in a subtle state, that cannot be distinguished with distinct name and form. He wills then that the sentient and non-sentient beings, that are His body, should have distinct names and forms. Then He separates from Himself all the sentient and non-sentient beings, that constitute His body in a subtle state. The scriptural authority is this He desired 'May I become many' (Taiṭ. I-2-6-2) 'He created all this' (Taiṭ. I-2-6-2). He entered the sentient and non-sentient beings that constitute His body in the subtle state also and that are different from Him. This is stated thus—'Having created it, He entered it'. (Taiṭ. I-2-6-2). Then the scriptural text teaches that He has transformed Himself into many forms 'He became Sat and Tyat, defined and undefined, based and non-based, conscious and unconscious, real and unreal; yet He remained as real' (Taiṭ. I-2-6-1). The above-mentioned texts teach that He took the modification into many forms. Therefore no contradiction arises. Even in the state of non-distinction the individual selves and their actions are in a subtle state. So states Brahma-sūtra II-1-35.

28. Yoniśca hi gīyate

He is sung as constituting the source also.

He is also called the source in the text—'The wise perceive Him as the source of beings' (Muṇḍ. I-1-6). Therefore He is the material cause also.

From these texts it is seen that the earth, etc., had certain functions which were possible only for those, endowed with knowledge. However it should be explained that the functions were of the presiding divinities; because the word,- divinities, is used in the text to qualify them, 'Alas! It is not so. That the Brahman has, as his body, all the sentient and non-sentient beings has been proved in the scriptural texts, 'To whom the self is the body' (Bṛh. V-7-22 Mādhya) 'To whom the Avyakta (the unevolved matter) is he body' (Sub. 7). There are instances to show that good and bad qualities exclusively belong to Him and His body, while He remains in the state of both the cause and the effect. The illustrative example is this:—'The man, in whose body

And on account of objections to one's own view, (i.e. of the Sāṁkhya system).

The Vedāntic view alone has to be accepted, as there are faults in the Sāṁkhya view that accepts the Pradhāna as the cause of the creation etc. of the world. In the school, that accepts Pradhāna to be the cause of the creation, etc. of the world, it is stated thus—'The Pradhāna undergoes changes in the presence of the Puruṣa, who always remain immutable'. And in consequence of the unfoundedness of the reasoning (i.e. the reasoning advanced by the Sāṁkhyas).

The argument, namely, 'The Pradhāna is the cause of the creation, etc. of the world' is based on wrong reasoning. The reasoning has not been firmly founded on good basis. Hence, the Pradhāna should not be held as the cause of the creation etc. of the world.

BHOKTRĀPATTYĀDHIKARAṆA 5

14. Bhoktrāpatteravibhāgas'cet syāllokavat

If it be said that from the Brahman becoming an enjoyer, there follows non-distinction of the Brahman and the individual self; we reply—it is as in ordinary worldly affairs.

[1] भोक्तृत्वापत्तेः A 1.

If it is desired that the Brahman should be the corporeal Self, because all the sentient and the non-sentient beings constitute His body, then it happens that the Brahman enjoys pleasure and pain, just as the individual self; and because He has a body, there should not be any distinction between the individual self and the Highest Self. It is not so. The Brahman is surely distinct from the individual self, as He possesses a host of auspicious qualities bereft of inauspicious ones. The experience of unliked things is not due to the connection with the body; but it is due to the fact of being dependant on others. In the world it is seen that the ruler, who is independent, has a body, but does not enjoy the fruits of the violation of his orders as his dependants are compelled to undergo the punishment.

ĀRAṀBHAṆĀDHIKARAṆA 6

15. Tadananyatvamārambhaṇas'abdādibhyaḥ

The non-difference of the world from that Brahman follows from the scriptural statement that begins with the word, Ārambaṇa.

The world which is caused by the Brahman is not different from its cause Brahman. This has been understood by the scriptural text dealing with His assumption of various modifications and having different names for the sake of worldly transactions through the verbal references. The scriptural texts quoted as authority here are—' A clod of clay undergoes changes by assuming different names for the worldly activities through the verbal references; Yet clod of clay only is true' (Chānd. VI-1-4.) ' Existence alone, my dear, was in the beginning one only without a second.' "It thought, ' may I become many' (Chānd. VI-2-1). ' All things that exist have Him as the Self;' and ' That thou art, Oh S'vetaketu'," (Chānd. VI-8-7).

16. Bhāve copalabdheḥ

And because, the cause is recognised in the state of the effect.

"इदं वा अग्रे नैव किंचनासीत्" इति कार्यस्य तदानीमसत्त्व-

In the state of the effect, such as pot etc., there is recognised its cause, thus, 'This is the same that substance i.e. clod of clay'. Therefore the effect is not different from the cause.

17. Sattvācecāparasya

And on accont of the existence of the other (i.e. the effect).

The effect exists in the cause. Hence, it is not different from the cause. That the pot or plate had at a former moment the shape of a clod of clay is generally experienced. Therefore pot, etc. are apprehended to be the modifications of a clod of clay.

18. Asadvyapadeśānneti cenna, dharmāntareṇa vākyaśeṣād yukteḥ śabdāntarācca

If it be said, 'not so, on account of the designation of the effect as non-existent, (i.e. Asat)', we reply, not so; on account of such designation being due to another attribute, as appears from the supplementary passage, from reasoning and from another verbal testimony.

The effect has been designated as a non-existent being at that time, in the scriptural text, 'In the beginning, truly, there was not anything whatever' (Taiṭ. Br. II-2-8). Therefore the effect does not exist in the cause. If such an objection arises, we say—It is not so. The designation as a non-existent being is due to the fact that the thing was with different attribute, namely, 'with a subtle state which is opposed to a gross state.' Why? It is so apprehended from the supplementary text, 'That Non-existent one formed the resolve, 'may I be' (Taiṭ. Br. II-28). Indeed the resolve can be made by that, which is extant. The reasoning also proves that the designation as non-existent is due to the association with a different attribute'. Indeed the substance, namely, 'The clod of clay', that is known to have an existence always, is designated a non-existent being etc. The illustrative example is this—The pot undergoes the changes and assumes the positive states, such as a clod of clay, the pot and the pieces of pot, that are mutually opposed to each other. By this reason it is generally said that 'This pot was in existence in a former time; it exists in the present time and it shall exist in a future time'. Other scriptural texts in support of this view are, 'Verily this was then undifferentiated' (Bṛh. I-4-7) etc.

[1] The vital winds are five in number. They are Prāṇa, Apāna, Vyāna, Udāna and Samāna. Prāṇa has its seat in the lungs. The Apāna is that which goes downwards and out of the anus. Vyāna is diffused through the whole body. Udāna rises up the throat and enters into the head. Samāna has the seat in the cavity of the naval and is essential for the digestion of food.

It is said in the scriptural text 'That thou art' (Chānd. VI-8-7). 'This self is Brahman' (Bṛh. VI-4-5) that the individual self, who is an effect, is not different from the Brahman. According to this truth, there arise in Him, the faults such as 'The Brahman, who is all-knowing and who possesses the true will, does not create the world, that is beneficial to Himself and He creates those things, which are not beneficial.'

This objection is not correct—

22. Adhikaṁ tu bhedanirdeśāt

But the Brahman is higher, on account of the declaration of difference.

We admit that the cause is not different from the effect; yet the nature of the Brahman is different from that of the individual selves. This is proved by the scriptural texts,

The Brahman, who has all the sentient and non-sentient beings as His body, has assumed the states of cause and effect. Thus the merits and the faults have been restricted. This has been stated in Brahma-Sūtra II-1-9. That He has all the sentient and non-sentient beings as body is proved in the scriptural text, 'To whom the earth is the body' (Sub. VII). 'To whom the self is the body' (Bṛh. Mādhya. V-7-22.)

It is seen that a number of instruments are employed in producing the effect. Hence the Brahman cannot be the single cause of the world. It is not so. The Brahman becomes the single cause of the creation, etc., of the world, in the same way as the milk transforming itself into the form of the curd.

It is stated that the Brahman, who has all the sentient and non-sentient beings as His body, assumes the states of the cause and the effect. Here the Brahman, who is thus embodied has been held as 'not having any parts'. Here it happens that the Brahman, taken as a whole, is transformed into the effect. In the school that accepts that a portion of the Brahman assumes the state of effect, the scriptural statement, namely 'The Brahman has no parts' becomes furious i.e. contradicted. Therefore the Brahman is not the cause of the creation, etc. of the world.

This view has been refuted thus—

27. S'rutestu S'abdamūlatvāt

But on account of the scriptureal authority it is not so; because the Brahman's nature could be apprehended only by the verbal testimony.

This objection does not happen as scriptures have been accepted to be the proofs. The nature of the Brahman can be proved only by the means of scriptures. The Brahman is distinct from other objects that could be established by other proofs. Therefore no contradiction arises, if the Brahman is possessed with powers unseen in other objects. Therefore the result is this :—'The Brahman is full in every way of all qualities both in the causal state and in the state of effect.' This is just as the Jāti (class) of those who accept it as a separate category, is full in each of the cows with broken horn or hornless.

The individual self possesses attributes, that are opposed to those subsisting in the non-sentient beings. This is due to the special powers found in him. The non-sentient beings, such as fire and water, etc. possess the mutually opposing attributes, have the powers specially attached to them and are seen distinct from each other.

The defects, such as the whole should transform itself into the effect, do exist only in the case of the Pradhāna, that is without parts and is of the same class as non-sentient beings. Hence the Brahman is the cause of the creation, etc. of the world.

Brahman is not the cause of the creation, etc. of the world, as He does not possess organs. This is stated in the scriptural text, 'No body or organ of His is found to exist' (S'vet. VI-8). Here the reply is this—In a former Sūtra II-1-27, it has been stated that the nature of the Brahman can be proved only by the means of scriptures and He is distinct from all other objects.

33. Lokavattu līlākaivalyam

But it is mere sport, as in ordinary worldly life.

As regards the creation of the world, sport can be the motive, though He has all wishes fulfilled. Hence, it is appropriate to say that He does not expect any thing to gain by the creation etc. of the world. In ordinary life balls etc. are used in games for mere sport. readiness of all necessaries that are essential for the enjoyment of all pleasures at all times'. The satisfaction arrived from the enjoyment of pleasures, is distinct from the self-satisfaction. The taste in sport is distinct from the twofold satisfaction mentioned above. The Pradhāna and the individual self are necessaries essential for His sport.

34. Vaiṣamyanairghṛṇye na, sāpekṣatvāt; tathā hi darśayati

In the part of the Brahman there is neither the inequality nor the cruelty; on account of the consideration of something; for so the scriptures declare.

While creating the gods and others of different status in life, He is neither partial nor cruel by temperament. The inequality in creation by the Highest Self is due to the Karmans or deeds of the individual selves. This is seen in the scriptural text thus—'He, who does good work, becomes good; he, who does evil work, becomes evil' (Bṛh. IV-4-5).

If it be said, there are no deeds, because of the non-difference; we say 'not so, on account of beginninglessness'; this is reasonable and it is also so observed.

One-ness is apprehended in the scriptural text, 'Existence alone, my dear, was in the beginning; One only' (Chānd. VI-2-1). At that time, the individual selves were not extant. Hence the Karmans or deeds do not attach themselves to the individual selves. It is not so; as the individual selves have not a beginning, the stream of their deeds also have not a beginning. This is reasonable. The individual selves have not a beginning; yet the scriptural text that states the non-difference, only establishes the non-distinction due to the absence of the name and form. The text is this 'Verily at that time this world was undifferentiated. It became differentiated just by name and form' (Bṛh. I-4-7). The view said above is in harmony with this text. The scriptural texts, that establish the beginningless nature of the

The Ānumāna (Pradhāna) is not the cause of the creation, etc. of the world, on account of the impossibility of construction and on account of activity.

The construction of chariots, mansions, etc. cannot be accomplished by the non-sentient beings, such as wood etc. without being employed by a person, who knows how to do them. And they could be made when they are employed by the person, who knows how to do them. Hence the Pradhāna, that is non-sentient being, that could be proved by the inference only and that is not guided by an intelligent person cannot be the cause of the creation, etc. of the world.

And if the inference be made in a different way, the result remains unchanged, on account of the Pradhāna being destitute of the power of knowing.

The expression, 'Being destitute of the power of knowing' means, 'Being devoid of the power of an intelligent'. Suppose Pradhāna is inferred by some reasoning different from the one so far refuted by us, even then, as it is devoid of the power of knowing the difficulties such as the impossibility of construction, etc. mentioned in Sūtra II-2-1, do firmly stand.

8. Abhyupagamepyarthābhāvāt

On account of the absence of a purpose, even if it be admitted, it should not be inferred.

This is not to be inferred; because no purpose will be served by considering Pradhāna to be the cause of the creation, etc. of the world. The intelligent person, who does

Hence, the two things that do not happen are these—(1) the enjoyment of pleasures etc., that is caused by the superimposition of the attributes of the Prakṛti on the intelligent person and (2) the release that could be had by distinguishing himself from the Pradhāna.

The doctrine of the Kāpilas is not intelligible ; because of the acceptance of many contradictory terms in the intelligent person, such as the powers of sight, enjoyment, and non-modification, etc.

the production of big and long from the short and the atom, are untenable.

The word Asamañjasa (untenable) is brought here from the previous Sūtra. The word, Vā (i.e. or) is used in the sense of Ca (i.e. and). Completely unintelligible are the views of that school, which hold the doctrine that the Tryaṇuka which is big and long is formed from the Dvyaṇukas (shorts) and Paramāṇus (atoms).[5] As a rule the parts, that possess six sides, begin the formation of a bigger object in combination. The atoms have no parts. Hence, they cannot have sides. Things such as atoms, that are brought together without any regard to their sides cannot produce a big object.

11. Ubhayathāpi na karmātastadabhāvaḥ

On both assumptions, motion does not originate in the atoms and thence there is no origination of the world.

It is impossible to accept that first motion can originate in the atoms. Therefore the conjunction of two or more atoms is impossible to accept. Though there may be required the maturity of the Adṛṣṭa (i.e. the unseen principle) in the individual selves, even then, the oceasional motion, that is caused by the Adṛṣṭa, cannot have its origin in the atoms. Suppose the maturity is not required, then the motion should have been produced in the atoms even before. In fact, maturity is not newly produced as a certain attribute in Adṛṣṭa. When regarded as commandments, particular actions yield particular results. Then at that particular time the individual selves attain that fruit. This is called as a maturation. When no particular time is fixed for such fruits, the maturation is the state of being not obstructed by more powerful deeds. Adṛṣṭa has the nature of granting the results, that are dependant upon the nature of the actions. Hence, maturity does not find a fixed place in all the individual selves at the same time; because the various actions grant various results at various times. The Lord can not be proved by the inference. Hence, it is impossible to argue that the atoms can create the world under the direction of the Lord.

12. Samavāyābhyupagamācca sāmyādanavasthiteḥ

And because, owing to the acknowledgment of Samavāya, there results regressus ad infinitum, on account of equality.

The views of the Vais'eṣikas are also untenable, on account of the acknowledgment of Samavāya; because Samavāya also like the Jāti (class) and Guṇa (qualities), requires something else, to prove the fact of its being inseparably connected. From this there arises the fallacy of regressus in infinitum. If it is argued that this nature of the Samavāya is such as being connected inseparably without requiring other means to prove it, let the same principle applied with the case of Jāti and Guṇa also.

13. Nityameva ca bhāvāt

And because the part and the whole, would thus be eternal on account of its eternity.

Samavāya is considered to be eternal. Such a consideration is not possible without that, to which the relation

14. Rūpādimattvācca viparyayo darśanāt

And on account of the atoms having colour, etc. the reverse (i.e. non-eternity of atoms) takes place; because it is so observed.

The atoms have colour etc. Hence its characteristics would be other than eternity; because such a principle is observed in regard to the pots, etc.

15. Ubhayathā ca doṣāt

And as there are defects in both the cases.

Suppose the atoms have no colour, because otherwise they become non-eternal, then the principle 'The properties of the effect are due to the properties of the cause' will have to be abandoned. If they have colour, they must be non-eternal. Therefore the whole argument is untenable; because faults do arise in both the cases.

It is also impossible to accept that a substance undergoes different states (Paryāyas) simultaneously, because the states such as lumpness, potness, and the state of broken pieces etc. which are said to be the objects of the cognition of existence and non-existence, are mutually contradictory. The earth, etc. undergo the states of pot, plate, etc. in different parts. It is not possible to apprehend in the same substance, impermanence and its opposing nature namely, permanence, because deviations from the principles accepted in the Vedic doctrinel It accepts that the Lord Pas'upati is only the instrumenta. cause of the world and not the material cause also. This view is opposed to the principles of the Vedic doctrine. There are also rules of conduct, that are opposed to what are stated in the Vedic texts.

And on account of the impossibility of agency.

Indeed, in the school that proves the existence of the Lord by inference, it is stated that the Lord is only the agent. This statement is not acceptable. If it were so, it happens that a bodiless Lord cannot be the agent of the Pradhāna. But suppose the Lord has a body; it is nowhere indicated, that His body is generated. Suppose He has limbs, and yet is eternal; then no contradiction arises in accepting the earth, and the mountain etc. as eternal.

If it is said that He is the agent as in the case of the organs; we deny this, because it would end in His enjoyment, etc.

The bodiless Lord is the agent of the Pradhāna as in the case of the individual self that rules the sense-organs and the body. It is not so. The activity of the individual selves with the rulership over the organs and body is due to the effect of their past good and bad deeds and is for the sake of enjoyment of pleasure and pain. The samething will happen in the Lord's case also.

39. Utpattyasaṁbhavāt

(The views of the pāñcarātra system are untenable) on account of the impossibility of origination.

[1] This is also called the Pāñcarātrādhikaraṇa.

Like the system of the Sāṁkhyas the Pāñcarātra system also is not authoritative, because in that system it is stated that the individual selves are created. This is opposed to what is stated in the scriptures and hence this is also not possible.

40. Na ca kartuḥ karaṇam

And there is not the origination of the instrument from the agent.

The agent is the individual self. The instrument is the mind. It is not stated in the scriptures, that the mind is produced from the individual self. The scriptural text is this—' From Him, is produced the breath, the mind and all the sense-organs ' (Muṇḍ. II-1-3).

41. Vijñānādibhāve vā tadapratiṣedhaḥ

Or,[1] if they are held to be the Lord, who is knowledge and the origin, there is no contradiction to that system.

[1] Here the term ' or ' sets aside the view of the opponent, mentioned in the previous Sūtras.

Consider the statement—'From Vāsudeva, there originates the individual self, called Saṁkarṣaṇa'. Here Saṁkarṣaṇa and others are said to be Vāsudeva whose essential characteristic is knowledge, and who is the origin of the world. Then there can be no refutation of the authoritativeness of the doctrine, that set forth this truth. That the Supreme Brahman Vāsudeva takes the incarnation on His own will, is said in the scriptural text. 'He is unborn; Yet is born as many' (Tait. Ār. III-13-1). The words, Jīva etc.' denote Saṁkarṣaṇa and others, who are encased in those particular bodies.

ADHYĀYA II, PĀDA III

VIYADADHIKARAṆA 1

1. Na viyadas'ruteḥ

The spatial ether is not produced on account of the non-hearing of its production.

The spatial ether is not generated, because there are not heard the scriptural statements on its production. It is not possible to hear from the scriptures the origination of it which has no parts, just as in the case of the self.

2. Asti tu

But there is hearing about the production of the spatial ether.

श्रवणं [1]संभवत्येव—"[2]आत्मन आकाशः संभूतः" इत्येवं हि श्रुतिरतीन्द्रियार्थविषया[3] वियदुत्पत्तिं प्रतिपादयति । [4]आत्मनः "न जायते" इति प्रतिषेधादनुत्पत्तिः ॥

It is heard that the spatial ether is a product. Indeed, the very same scriptural text, which treats of the objects, that are beyond the congnizance of the sense-organs declares that the spatial ether is a product—'The Spatial ether is produced from the self' (Taiṭ. II-1-2) But the individual, self is known not produced because the scriptural statement 'He is not born' (Kaṭh. I-2-18).

3. Gauṇyasaṁbhavācchabdācca

The scriptural text here, has a secondary meaning, on account of the impossibility and of the verbal authority.

Fire is mentioned as the first product in the text, 'It sent forth fire' (Chānd. VI-2-3). Hence, the text, 'The spatial ether is produced' (Taiṭ. II-1-2), is to be taken in the secondary sense. It is so also because there is the text, 'The wind and the spatial ether. This is Immortal' (Bṛh. II-3-3).

4. Syāccaikasya Brahmaśabdavat

A word may be used in different senses, as in the case of the word, Brahman.

The word, Sambhūta is used in a secondary sense with reference to the spatial ether, and in its original sense with reference to other objects. This discrimination is quite possible when the same word is referred to in a further text, just as in the case of the word which is actually uttered in other place. Consider the following for instance—The word, Brahman, is used in the secondary sense in the text, 'From Him is born this Brahman, name, form and food' (Muṇḍ. I-10). Here the word Brahman denotes the Prakṛti in the secondary sense. But in other text it is used in the primary sense; vide 'The Brahman swells on His thought' (Muṇḍ. I-9).

This view is refuted thus—

5. Pratijñāhāniravyatirekāt

The non-abandonment of the Pratijñā (proposition) results from non-difference.

The proposition, mentioned in the scriptural text, 'By hearing on whom, the unheard becomes heard' is this—'The knowledge of one produces the knowledge of all'. This proposition is not discarded, because the spatial ether etc. are the effects produced by the Brahman and they are not different from Him.

6. S'abdebhyaḥ

This follows from other texts.

The scriptural text, namely, 'The ether is produced' makes one understand that the spatial ether is created. This statement cannot be over-ridden by the absense of the word 'Ākās'a' in the text, 'He produced the fire', which declares that the fire was the first among the creatures.

7. Yāvadvikāraṁ tu vibhāgo lokavat

But the division (i.e. origination) extends over all effects as in popular worldly usage.

The spatial ether, etc. undergo modifications, as stated in the text, 'All this has Him as the Self' (Chānd. VI-8-7). What has been determined here is this—'The statements made as regards the creation of fire, etc. are intended to include also the creation of all other creatures. In the popular usage, some one has said first, 'All these ten are the sons of Devadatta'. Then he mentions some of them as born from Devadatta.

Hereby the wind becomes explained (as an effect).

The wind is separately mentioned here so that it may be referred to in the further Sūtras II-3-10 and so on.

9. Asaṁbhavastu satonupapatteḥ

The non-origination is for that existence only, because of its impossibility in other cases.

TEJODHIKARAṆA 2

The effects that are said to have been produced with the mediation of the ether etc. are produced directly by the Brahman. To establish this truth, the Sūtrakāra raises the following objections to answer—

10. Tejotastathāhyāha

Fire is produced thence, for thus the scripture declares.

The fire is originated from the wind alone and not directly from the Braman, because the scriptural text states thus—'From wind the fire is produced' (Taiṭ. I-2-1-2).

Here the conclusive answer of the objection is this—

14. Tadabhidhyānādeva tu tallingāt saḥ

But He is the cause of the creation, etc. of the world; because there are indicative marks namely His contemplation.

There is the expression in the phrases, 'The fire thought' (Chānd. VI-2-3) and 'The water, thought' (Chānd. VI-2-4) which resemble more or less the other text 'That thought may I become many' and furnish the token of the universal cause i.e. Highest Self. This text proves that the Highest Self is the direct cause of the creation, etc. of the world; because He has fire etc. as His body and is denoted by the words fire etc.

The contrariety of the order of succession is possible, only if the origination of all effect is from Him (the Brahman).

The order of succession in a different form is stated in the scriptural text, ‘ From Him is produced the vital wind, the spatial ether, wind, fire and water ’ (Kaṭh. II-1-3). From this statement it is clear that the creation proceeds direct from the Brahman. Therefore it follows that the creation proceeds from the Brahman, who has fire, etc. as His body.

That between the vital wind (Prāṇa) and elements are produced the sense-organs and mind, is taught in the text—'The spatial ether, the wind, the fire and the water,' (Muṇḍ. II-1-3), because the recognition of the order mentioned in the other S'ruti passage. Therefore this text also states the creation in certain order with mediation. It is not so; because the statement, 'From Him is produced' (Muṇḍ. II-1-3), is common in regard to the creation of the substances beginning with the vital-wind and ending with the earth. Therefore the Highest Self only is the direct cause of fire, etc.

In the statements 'The fire thought, etc.' the words, Fire, etc., refer to the well-known popular fire etc. They are used in secondary sense in the case of the Brahman. To this objection the reply is stated thus :—

Those terms which are connected with things movable and immovable, i.e. the terms denoting those things, refer to the Brahman in the non-secondary sense, i.e. in the primary sense. According to the scriptural text 'Let me enter as the soul and separate out name and form' (Chând. VI-3-2) the Brahman enters all the things as their soul and gives them separate names and forms. But the people ignorant of this, use the words in a portion of their full meaning.

The individual selves are not atomic in size; because there is the scriptural text, 'Verily He is infinite, unborn Self' (Bṛh. IV-4-22). This is not so, because the context refers to the Highest Self. This is seen in the text, 'By whom this Self is understood and meditated' (Bṛh. VI-4-13).

There is no contradiction, taking the case of the sandal-ointment for instance.

A drop of sandal-ointment, although applied to one spot of the body, produces the refreshing sensation extending all over the body. Same is the case with the self also. Hence no contradiction arises.

If it be said that the case is different, because the drop of the sandal-ointment is in contact with a definite part of the body; we say—this is not so; because the self also abides in a part of the body. It is an accepted fact that the self abides in the heart. In support of this statement, there is the following scriptural passage 'He who is within the heart, among the Prāṇas, the person of light consisting of knowledge' (Bṛh. IV. 3-7).

The author states his own view thus:—

26. Guṇādvālokavat

The self experiences happiness by pervading the whole of the body through knowledge, which is his attribute. This is similar to a gem, etc. that enlighten all the space pervading through their own light. Thus the scriptural text says

'The elements of being are fixed on the elements of intellegence' (Kauṣ. III-9).

On the objection that the knowledge and the self are not distinct entities from each other, the answer is stated thus:—

27. Vyatireko gandhavat; tathāca darśayati

There is distinction as in the case of the smell; thus scripture declares.

There is distinction between the knowledge and the self; because the knowledge is apprehended as the attribute of the self, in the notion, 'I know'. This is similar to the smell, which is known as a quality of the earth by the notion 'the earth has the smell'. The scriptural text, namely, 'This person knows' also proves this,

28. Pṛthagupadeśāt

It is so on account of the scriptural statement as different.

The self is taught to be different from the knowledge in the scriptural text, 'There is no cessation of the knowledge of the knower' (Bṛh. IV-3-30).

How then is it possible to explain the statement that the self is only mere knowledge, as found in the scriptural text, 'He is the only knowledge' (Bṛh. IV-3-7).

It is replied thus :—

29. Tadguṇasāratvāt tu tadvyapadeśaḥ prājñavat

But the self is designated as the knowledge; because he has that knowledge for his essential quality; as in the case of the intelligent Highest Self (Prājña).

The self is designated as knowledge; because he has knowledge as his essential quality. As regards the intelligent Self (Brahman), it is so stated in the scriptural text, 'The Brahman is the Truth, knowledge' (Taiṭ. I-2-1).

No mistake arises in such designation, since the quality of knowledge exists in the self, as long as the self exists; this is so observed in the scriptural text.

No mistake arises, when the self is designated as the knowledge; because that knowledge is seen through out as the essential nature of the self. Indeed, it is seen that a cow with broken horns is designated as cow, on account of its particular characteristic appearing through out as its essential nature.

How could it be said that the knowledge is always associated with the self as long as he exists, when it is absent in him at the state of deep sleep (i.e. Suṣupti)?

In reply it is stated thus:—

Since there may be the manifestation of that which has been already in existence, as in the case of the virile power, etc.

restriction. By following the same line of argument, the non-consciousness also would always take place. When the knowledge is apprehended, it cannot be prevented by other reasons. The same mistakes arise in the school, that accepts the self is identical with knowledge that arises occasionally and is omnipresent. All the selves are extant everywhere. What is common to all these selves is that the knowledge is produced when they are brought in contact with the mind (Manas) and so on. Nor it cannot be restricted by Adṛṣṭa, because it is produced in all the individual selves. If it is argued that consciousness and non-consciousness are opposed to each other and therefore it may cause consciousness or non-consciousness only. In that case either consciousness or non-consciousness only will necessarily take place.

The S*mṛti* text also teaches the same—'And I am placed in the hearts of all. From me come memory, knowledge, and their loss also' (Bhag. Gī. XV-15).

The individual selves do an act or abstain from doing it, out of their own will. Then the Highest Self taking into account the individual soul's effort resulting the activity and abstinence, aids the individual selves in their efferts by granting his permission. This fact is known from the non-meaninglessness of injunctions and prohibitions, punishment and favour of the Lord. A weak person cannot carry a heavy load of wood etc. himself. Yet he carries the same with the help of a strong man and comes in the scope of the Vidhi (injunction) or Niṣedha (prohibition) of the act. In the same way the individual selves do an act with the permission of the Highest Self. Yet they become parties to the injunctions or prohibitions. Hence no contradiction arises.

on account of the declaration of difference and otherwise; some also record that the Brahman is the fishermen, gamblers, and so on.

The individual self is a part of the Highest Person. The scriptural texts, namely 'Knowing the individual self and the actuator to be different' (S'vet. 1-6), and 'He is the cause, He is the lord of the lords of the senses' (S'vet. VI-9) indicate that the individual selves are different from the Brahman. Otherwise also that the Brahman is one with the individual self, has been stated in the texts, 'That thou art' (Chānd. VI-10-3) and 'This self is the Brahman' (Bṛh. IV-4-5). Some declare the oneness of the Brahman with the individual selves in the text, 'Brahman are these fishermen etc.' (Brahma-Sūkta) because He is pervading all the individual selves. Both these statements (i.e, difference and non-difference between the Brahman and the individual selves) become sensible in primary and original thought, when the individual selves are held to form the part of the Brahman.

Thus the Prāṇas (sense-organs) also are not created.

The individual selves are not created ; because there are scriptural texts to prove that they are not produced and they are eternal. Same is the case with the sense-organs also. It is taught in the scriptures that, at the time of the Pralaya (the deluge), the Prāṇas did exist. The scriptural text is this—'The non-being (Asat) alone was in the beginning. Those sages in the beginning were, indeed, the Asat (i.e.

The plural number is to be considered in a secondary sense; because it cannot be in the primary sense and since the Highest Self alone is declared to have an existence before the creation.

There are scriptural texts to show that the Highest Self alone was in existence before creation. The words 'sages' and 'Prāṇas' refer to the Highest Self only. Because He cannot be designated with a word in plural number, in the scriptural statement the plural number is to be considered as used instead of the singular number in a secondary sense.

On account of the speech having for its antecedent the creation.

The objects, other than the Highest Self, could be designated by names, only after the creation of the fire etc, by the Highest Self. Therefore at that time, the word, Prāṇa cannot refer to the sense-organs.

They are seven on account of the mentioning of movement and of specification.

The sense-organs are only seven in number. 'The seven Prāṇās come forth from Him' (Muṇḍ. II-1-8). 'When the five senses of knowledge stand still together with the mind and when the Buddhi does not move' (Kaṭh. II-3-10). From the above mentioned scriptural texts it is understood that only the seven senses move with the individual selves and

But the hands, etc. are also the organs; since they also assist the self when he abides in the body. Therefore it is not so.

Hands, etc. are also organs; because they also assist the self, when he abides in the body. Therefore the organs are not seven only; but they are eleven. The scriptural statement is this—'Ten are these organs in person and Ātman is the eleventh' (Bṛh. III-9-4). 'The organs are ten and one' (Bhag. Gī. XIII-5). Buddhi, etc. are different functions of the Manas (mind). The scriptures mention the movement of the seven sense-organs and specify them. This is due to the fact, that they are prominent among the group.'

The Prāṇa is distinct from the mere wind ; but it is not an element completely different from it, like fire, etc. The wind itself has taken the form, that is useful in sustaining the body and is helpful for the functions of the individual selves, like the eye, etc. ; because it is mentioned in the scriptural text along with the eye, etc. It is also equally helping the individual selves, like the eye etc. and is important among them.

10. Akaraṇatvācca nadoṣastathāhi darśayati

And no objection arises on account of the absense of its function ; for the scriptures declare its function.

The word, 'Karaṇa' here means function ; but no defect arises on the presumption that it has no any action, which may be helpful to the individual selves. Verily the scriptural texts declare that it functions so that the body

The scriptural text, that states that the Prāṇa is created as different from the sense-organs is this—'From Him is originated Prāṇa, mind and all the sense-organs' (Muṇḍ. II-1-3). It is also thus because the functions of the Prāṇa do not stop, even when the sense-organs cease to function. Hence the sense-organs and the Prāṇa possess distinct characteristics.

But the assignment of the names and forms belongs to Him, who does Trivṛtkaraṇa (combining the three elements); on account of the scriptural teaching.

The assignment of the names and forms such as gods etc. belongs to the Highest Self alone, who has for His body the four-faced god (the creator); and not to the four-faced god himself. This is so because the scriptural text teaches that the assignment of the names and forms was made by the same who did the Trivṛtkaraṇa (combining the three elements). The scriptural text is this—'Let me differentiate names and forms and let me make each of them as combination of the three elements' (Chānd. VI-3-2). But the four-faced god cannot do himself the Trivṛtkaraṇa. First is created the egg-shaped universe out of fire, water, and food combined together. Subsequently the four-faced god is created. The Smṛti text is this—'That egg-shaped universe of golden colour

Flesh etc. are of earthy nature; in the case of the other two, it has to be considered according to the text.

Consider the scriptural text, 'The food eaten is divided into three parts' (Chānd. VI-5-1). Here is stated the mode of modification of the food etc. taken by men living in the egg-shaped universe, the modification being different from the Trivṛtkaraṇa. Otherwise the flesh and the mind (Manas) which are smaller in size than the excavated matters, must have the character of fire and water. If it were so, it contradicts the statements, 'Food taken is formed into three' (Chānd. VI-5-1); because the earth alone is said to become into the three (i.e. the food, water, and fire). It also contradicts the statement, 'Oh beloved,! The mind is Annamaya (the modification, of food)' (Chānd. VI-5-4); because the mind has the character of earth. In the same way there will be the contradiction in respect of the three-fold modification of the other two, namely, fire and water. Therefore it is stated thus—'The flesh, etc. are of earthy nature. In the case of the other two, it has to be considered according to the text.' Indeed it is stated here that the flesh and mind, have an earthy nature, like the excavated matters. In the same way the blood, and the Prāṇa are of watery nature, as in the case of the urine. In the same way the marrow and speech are of fiery nature, as in the case of the bones.

There is the combination of the three made already. How then can it be said that the object, that is the combination of the three is mentioned as earth, water and fire ? Here the reply is this :—

And on account of the going out of the Prāṇas (with the individual selves).

'When the Prāṇa (the self) departs from (the body) all the Prāṇas pass away following him' (Bṛh. IV-4-2) The sense-organs pass out the body along with the individual self. It is. therefore, apprehended that the sense organs depart from the body along with the subtle form of the body which is the seat of them.

4. Agnyādigatiśrutiriti cenna, bhāktatvāt

If it be said that it is not so on account of scriptural statement as to their going to Agni (fire) etc; we say no; on account of the secondary nature of the statement.

[1] M 2, adds after 'स्मर्यते च मनःषष्ठानीन्द्रियाणीत्यादिना ।'

As the texts, ‘when the speech of the dead goes into fire’ (Bṛh. III. 2-13) etc. declare that when a person dies, his organs go into fire, etc. Hence they do not accompany the individual selves. This question is not correct. Here the words, speech etc., have the secondary meaning, namely ‘the divinities (Agni etc.) who preside over them; because the text continues to say ‘The hairs of the body enter into the herbs’. (Bṛh. III. 2-13). The hairs do not enter with the visible form into the herbs.

5. Prathameśravaṇāditi cenna, tā eva hyupapatteḥ

Should it be said, on account of the absence of mention of the water in the first instance the waters do not go; we say no; for just that is meant, on the ground of appropriateness.

The waters do not go with the individual selves, because the scriptural texts do not mention waters in the first instance (in the fire of heavens). In the scriptural text, ‘Into that fire, the Devas (senses) offer S'raddhā as oblation’ (Chānd. V. 4-2) we understand that only the word, S'raddhā is used. It is not so. Only water is meant by the word, S'raddhā, because to the question relating to the water, the reply must be on the water itsef. This reply is sensible only if the water is meant by the word S'raddhā. There is scriptural text also 'S'raddhā, indeed, is water' (Tait. Brāh. III. 2-4-1).

6. As'rutatvāditi cenna, iṣṭādikāriṇām pratīteḥ

If it be said that the self is not stated in the scripture; way say 'it is not so'; because those, who perform sacrifice etc, have been understood there.

If it is said that water alone is understood by the question and answer in this context and not the individual selves, that are embraced by the subtle rudimentary elements; we say it is not so; because in a subsequent passage of the text is mentioned the route taken by those selves who perform the sacrifices etc. The text is this—'But those who in the village perform sacrifices, dig wells, etc. and grant gifts' (Chānd. V. 10-3). There is another scriptural text 'By that oblation he becomes King Soma' (Chānd. V. 4-2). Here that, who is denoted by the word 'water' connected with the fire of Dyuloka (the heavens), is mentioned as becoming the King Soma. The same that has assumed the state of King Soma is recognised in the scriptural text 'King Soma' (Chānd. V. 10-4). Therefore by the word, water, is meant the individual self, who is embraced with the water and has it for his body. This is what is understood in the scriptural texts.

7. Bhāktaṁ vānātmavittvāt; tathā hi darśayati

Or this reference is metaphorical; because of their not knowing the Self. Indeed thus the scripture declares.

'He becomes Soma King; Him the gods eat' (Chānd. V. 10-4). Here the eating by the gods of the self who has become as King Soma, must be taken metaphorically. The idea is that he becomes the means of enjoyment of the gods; because he is other than the realizer of the Self. Accordingly it has been stated in the text 'He is like an animal for the gods,' (Bṛh. 1-4-10). This statement reveals that he is the means of enjoyment of the gods. The following

KṚTĀTYAYĀDHIKARAṆA 2

8. Kṛtātyayenuśayavān dṛṣṭasmṛtibhyāṁ yathetamanevaṁ ca

On the exhaustion of the Karmans, the selves descend with a remainder of Karman, according to the Vedic texts and Smṛtis. The descent is by the same route of the ascent and also not so.

It is understood by the scriptures and the Smṛtis that on the exhaustion of Karmans, the self returns to this world with a remainder of the Karman whose fruits he has not enjoyed. The scriptural text is this—'Those, whose deeds are good, are born in good families' (Chānd. V. 10-7). The Smṛti texts are these—'Afterwards when a man returns to this world, he obtains, by virtue of a remainder of Karman, birth, form' (Āpa. Dha. Sūtra II. 1, 2, 3) and so on. The descent takes place partly through the route of ascent and partly by a different route.

"ततः परिवृत्तौ कर्मफलशेषेण जातिं रूपम्" इत्यादिका स्मृतिः। [1]आरोहणप्रकारेण मार्गैकदेशे,[2] प्रकारान्तरेण चैकदेशे[3] ॥

9. Caraṇāditi cenna, tadupalakṣaṇārtheti Kārṣṇājiniḥ

Should it be said that it is not so on account of the term Caraṇa; not so, since Caraṇa connotes the Karman also: thus Kārṣṇājini thinks.

The word, Caraṇa, occurring in the passage 'Those, whose deeds are good' does not mean the remainder of Karman, because it is generally used in the sense of Smārtācāra (i.e., general conduct, described in the Smṛtis). Therefore the self is not followed by the remainder of his Karman. This is not so. In the scriptural text the term Caraṇa connotes the remainder of Karman also; because the pleasure and grief are the result of such Karman only.

10. Ānarthakyamiti cenna, tadapekṣatvāt

Should it be said that there is no purpose; it is not so, on account of the dependence of Karman on the conduct.

No purpose is served as there is no use of the conduct mentioned in the Smṛtis. It is not so; because all the good works are dependent on the conduct. Because it is stated thus—'He, who does not worship Sandhyā, is always impure, and he is unfit for any religious work'. This is the view of Kārṣṇājini.

11. Sukṛtaduṣkṛte eveti tu Bādariḥ

But Bādari thinks that the word Caraṇa means good and evil works only.

The word, Caraṇa, occurring in the text 'Ramaṇīya-caraṇāḥ and 'Kapūya-caraṇāḥ' means good and evil actions as evident from the usage 'he does the works of good nature.' This has been opined by Bādari. Sūtrakāra accepts this view

Even for those who do not perform the sacrifice, etc. the ascent is declared by scriptures.

Even they, who do not perform the sacrifices and do not dig wells etc. reach the moon. This is stated in the scriptural text, 'All, who depart from this world, go to the moon' (Kauṣ. I-9).

As the rice etc., are already animated by other selves, the descending selves, only cling to them as stated in the text, 'They are born as rice, grain etc. (Chāṇḍ. V-10-6). It is because there is no mention of the cause of the birth as rice etc. just as in the case of the birth as the ether etc. The word, 'born' used therein must be taken in a metaphorical sense. Suppose they are born as Brāhmaṇas etc., then there is mentioned the cause of the birth in the text 'those of good deeds', etc., (Chānd. V-10-7).

While descending, the individual selves descend with their impure actions; because when they performed sacrifices in former generations, they committed injury to living beings, that were offered in Agniṣoma and other sacrifices. It is not so. Slaughtering the animals in sacrifices is not of an injurious kind. This is stated in the text, 'with a golden body, it goes up to the heavenly world;' 'By this action you do not die, nor you become subject to injury' (Tait. Brā. III-7-7).

It is so, because the following scriptural text declares the individual self, the experiencer of the dream, as the creator of what he sees in the sleep—'He creats the tanks and streams, as he is the creator' (Bṛh. IV. 3-10).

What are meant by the word Kāmas here are the sons etc. that are desired; because in the previous passage it is stated thus—' Ask for all Kāmas according to your wish '. True will etc. are the natural characteristics of the individual selves; however, these do not manifest themselves completely when the men are under the influence of Saṁsāra. Therefore the creation in dreams is not possible for the selves by their true will. The scriptural texts 'He is the creator' (Bṛh. IV-3-10) and 'The person is creating' (Kaṭh. II. 2-8), do not refer to the individual selves, because there is the following scriptural text in the same context, 'On Him all the worlds do rest and no one exceeds Him' (Kaṭh. II-2-8).

The next Sūtra reveals the cause for the non-manifestation of the characteristics though they are natural to the selves:

The characteristics of the individual selves become concealed on account of the will of the Highest; because the individual selves have committed a series of wrongs, that has not a beginning. On account of the wrongs committed by the individual selves, the Lord's will continues. Indeed, the bondage and liberation of the self do follow His will. 11. Na sthānatopi parasyobhayaliṅgaṁ sarvatra hi

Not, even on account of residing, is there any imperfection in the Highest Self; for everywhere He is described as having two-fold characteristics.

No imperfection arises in the Highest Self, even though He remains as an inner Ruler in the selves during the four states, such as the waking, etc. In the scriptures and in the Smṛtis it is heard that the Highest Self possesses the two fold characteristics, namely, the total absence of all the imperfections and the possession of all good qualities. The texts are—'He is free from evil and possesses true will' (Chānd. VIII-1-5). 'Without any stain' (S'vet. 6-19). 'He, who understands all and knows all' (Muṇḍ. I-1-9). 'He, in nature, is full of all the auspicious qualities' (Viṣṇ. Pu. VI-5-84). Where all evils, sufferings etc. do not exist' (Viṣṇ. Pu. VI-5-85).

Should it be said on account of different states, the imperfections cling to Him; it is not so, because with reference to each of the states, the texts say that the evils are not in Him.

The imperfections do cling to the individual selves, though they are in nature devoid of those imperfections; because the selves are connected with different bodies. In the same way the imperfections cling to the Highest Self also, as He is connected with bodies as stated in the text, 'whose body is the earth' (Bṛh. V-7-3) and so on. It is not so. As regards the statement, 'whose body is the earth', there is the counter-statement, 'He is Your Self, the inner controller and the immortal' (Bṛh. III-7-3). This statement reveals that He is devoid of imperfections.

13. Api caivameke

Some also declare thus.

The individual selves and the Highest self are encased in the same body. Yet their differential characteristics are

14. Arūpavadeva hi, tatpradhānatvāt

The Brahman is altogether like without form, since He is the principal agent with regard to that.

The Brahman behaves like a formless object, though He is the Soul, possessed with the bodies of men etc. He is the principal, as He gives names and forms for all objects. The authoritative scriptural text is thus—He is responsible for the name and Form ; yet He remains aloof between them, (Chānd. VIII-14). 'He remains aloof between them' means 'He is not connected with the name and form.' The purport is 'He is not dependent to others.'

The Brahman is of these characteristics like the light, so that the scriptures will not be meaningless.

The scriptural text, 'Truth, knowledge, etc.' (Tait. I-2-1-1) is not devoid of meaning. Hence Brahman possesses the characteristic of knowledge, as He is self-luminous by nature. So also Brahman possesses the two-fold characteristics, namely, 'being devoid of evils' and 'being possessed of good qualities'; because the following countless scriptural texts are not devoid of meaning—'He is devoid of evils' (S'vet. VI. 19). 'He, who understands all and knows all' (Muṇḍ. 1. 10). 'His supreme power is revealed, indeed, as varied and natural. And so are His knowledge, strength and activity' (S'vet. VI. 8).

does not exclude anything more, because there is no any reason for such a discrimination and there is no any contradiction.

17. Dars'ayati cātho api smaryate

This is seen in the scriptures and also in the Smṛtis.

The string of the scriptural texts shows that the Brahman is devoid of imperfections and is full of good qualities. The texts are 'He is without parts, without activity, tranquil' (S'vet. VI. 19). 'He is the Great and Supreme Lord of the lords' (S'vet. VI. 7) etc. The Smṛti text is this,—'He, who knows Me unborn, beginningless etc.' (Bhag. Gī. X. 3).

18. Ata evacopamā sūryakādivat

For this very reason, comparisons, such as reflected images of the sun and the like, are mentioned in the scriptures.

The Brahman is devoid of evils and He is the mine of many good qualities, though He remains everywhere in the earth, etc. Hence in the following scriptures the comparisons, such as reflected images of the sun in the water etc. are mentioned in the scriptures—'Just as the ether, is one and the same without change even it becomes encased in the pots etc. and just as the sun reflected in water.' (Yājñ. Smṛ. Prā. 144.)

Then puts the following objection—

19. Ambuvadagrahaṇāt tu na tathātvam

But the case is not so, because He is not apprehended there like the sun in the water.

The question here is this—The sun is apprehended as reflected in the waters. In the same way the Highest self is not apprehended in earth etc. But here He remains actually. Therefore He is not devoid of evils.

Then refutes the objection—account of the appropriateness of both (comparisons) and because it is seen thus.

The word 'not' is supplied from the last Sūtra. It is not so. The Highest Self dwells within the earth, etc. as an immanent ruler. The illustrative example only denies the increase and decrease on His part due to such dwelling. This is understood in this way, because then only the two illustrative examples in the context could be reconciled. The spatial ether actually remains in the pot etc. on the other hand the sun does not actually remain in the water. This fact is stated in the scriptural text 'Indeed, as one and the same spatial ether' (Yājñ. Smṛ. Prā. 144). The purpose of these two examples is to show that just as the object actually not present is not stained by imperfections, so also the object actually present is not stained by imperfections for want of reasons. The examples are meant to teach this fact alone. Consider the illustrative example 'The boy is like a lion'. This brings to our mind the similarity, only in regard to some of the attributes meant to refer.

Or the word 'Dars'anāt' may be interpreted in different way as recorded in the scriptural text. 'Like the horse that gives up its hair by shaking the body, he gives up the sins (Pāpa)' (Chānd. VIII, 13). The horse by shaking the body gives up some of the solid substances i.e. hairs that are natural to it and constitute part of its body. But the self once did evil works which though perished in a moment, created displeasure to the Lord. The Lord began to give him pains that were effected by His displeasure. But these pains could be got rid of through His grace produced by affection caused by the meditation. Hence non-attachment of evils is what is thought of here.

Here the following objection arises—The Brahman does not possess the two-fold characteristics; because His having attributes has been denied in the scriptural text, 'Then this is the injunction, namely 'not that, not that' (Bṛh. II. 3-6).

21. Prakṛtaitāvattvaṁ hi pratiṣedhati; tato bravīti ca bhūyaḥ

For, the text denies His limitedness supposed to be apprehended in the context and it declares also more than that.

It has been taught in the scriptural text beginning with 'There are two-fold forms of the Brahman' (Bṛh. II. 3-1), that the whole world is the form of the Brahman, as this truth was not known previously by other means. Therefore this truth cannot be denied immedaitely by the subsequent passage of the same text. Therefore the statement, 'Not that, not that' denies the so-muchness of the Brahman to purport that the Brahman's attributes are not only those mentioned in previous passage; but there are more also. Then the text also states the host of His qualities not stated above, in the passages—'There is none Great' except the Brahman, who is denoted by the words, 'not that' (Bṛh. II. 3-6). Then there is the text, 'Then He has the name Real of the Real' (Bṛh. II. 3-6). Then its explanation given is this—'Prāṇas

तेषामेष सत्यम्" इति । प्राणा [1]जीवात्मानो वियदादिवदुत्पत्त्यभावात् सत्यम् । तेषामेष सत्यम्; तेभ्योऽप्येष सत्यम्, ज्ञानसंकोचाद्यभावात् । अतः [2]प्रकृतैयत्तामात्रप्रतिषेधादुभयलिङ्गमेव ब्रह्म[3] ॥

are true. Than them, this (Highest Self) is more true (Bṛh. II. 3-6). Here the word Prāṇas denotes the selves. They are real because they are not created like the ether etc. Than these selves, the Highest Self is the Greater Truth; because His knowledge has no shrinking and other changes. Hence the Brahman is said to possess the two-fold characteristics, because His so-muchness only has been denied in the scriptural text.

By the proof of perception is apprehended the Brahman only, who is merely sat (existence). All the rest are illusory. This is the meaning of the statement, of denial 'Not that, not that'. (Bṛh. II. 3-6). To this objection the reply is this—

22. Tadavyaktamāha hi

That (Brahman) is unmanifested; for, so the scripture declares.

The essential nature of the Brahman cannot be manifested by any of the proofs. The scriptural texts state thus—

23. Api saṁrādhane pratyakṣānumānābhyām

And in perfect endearment the intuition of Brahman takes place, according to scriptures and Smṛti texts.

There must be the uninterrupted meditation, which gives the extreme happiness to the worshipper and by which the Brahman becomes pleased. Then will be apprehended the essential nature of the Brahman. The scriptural text is this—'This Self is not reached by instruction' (Kaṭh. I-2-23). The Smṛti text is this 'Nor can I be seen by the study of the vedas, etc.' (Bhag. Gī. XI-53).

24. Prakāśādivaccāvaiśeṣyam; prakāśaśca karmaṇyabhyāsāt

in respect of their being apprehended. The apprehension takes place by the means of uninterrupted practice of meditation.

As regards the perfect endearment, the practice of meditation must be repeated. Then in the devotee is produced the apprehension of the essential nature of the Brahman. Then what are apprehended here are all the attributes of Brahman, such as knowledge, bliss and the wealth of the world, without any discrimination. This has been stated thus: 'I have become Manu and the Sun' (Bṛh. I-4-10).

Or in the manner stated above.

The word, 'Or' is used in the sense of discarding the two alternative views mentioned above. It has been stated in a previous occasion that the individual selves are the parts of the Brahman, who is inseparably connected with them. The individual selves are of the nature of adjectives to the Brahman like the light, class, quality and body are to the respective objects. Same is the case with the non-sentient beings also; because the sentient and the non-sentient beings nre regarded to be one with the Brahman by the use of a common term in the text, 'Verily the Self is this whole world' (Chāṇd. VII-25-2). As regards the other two alternatives, it is not possible to set aside the faults, that happen to be in the Brahman. It has been proved in the scriptural texts, that the sentient and the non-sentient beings have the character of adjectives; because they are considered as the body of the Brahman 'To whom earth is the body' (Bṛh. III-7-3). 'To whom the self is the body' (Bṛh. III-7-3. Mādhy.).

The scriptures teach that (a) He is the bridge, (b) He is to be crossed, (c) He is measured, (d) He leads men for attainment of the bliss. The scriptures are—'Now the Self is the bridge' (Chānd. VIII-4-1). 'Having crossed that bridge' (Chānd. VIII-4-2). 'The Brahman has four feet' (Chānd. III-18-2), 'He is the bridge that leads to immortality' (Muṇḍ. II-4-5). There are also other texts—'By this Person this whole universe is filled. That which is above this. (S've. III and 10). Thus it is understood that there is another entity which is higher than the Brahman.

31. Sāmānyāt tu

But on account of the usage on resemblance.

The word, 'but' refutes the allegations made in the previous Sūtra. What is stated above is not correct. Why? Because there are thousands of scriptural texts denying the existence of what is highest apart from the Brahman mentioned in the words 'not that' and possessed of the universe with and without forms as adjectives. The text is this—'There is none Highest except this Self that is mentioned in the words 'not that' (Bṛh. II-3-6). The Highest Brahman is designated as bridge on His resemblance with bridge: because as the ruler, He prevents the admixture of the worlds. Accordingly the following scripture says—'Now, the Self is the bridge and support, in order to prevent confusion in these worlds' (Chānd. VIII-4-1). The Brahman alone, who is the instrumental cause and the material cause of the world is to be attained as the Highest object. This is stated in the scriptural text beginning with: 'All this world is the Brahman. He is its creator, destroyer and protector. He is thus to be meditated upon with a calm mind' (Chānd. III-14-1) and ending with 'I shall reach Him after departing hence' (Chānd. III-14-4). The expression 'He has to be crossed' means 'He has to be reached'.

33. Sthānaviśeṣāt prakāsādivat

Owing to the Brahman being associated with particular places, as in the case of light, etc.

It is right to meditate upon the immeasurable Brahman by connecting Him with particular places. The light and the spatial ether, etc. can be apprehended as that which passes through the window and that which is encased within the pot respectively.

34. Upapatteśca

And on account of its possibility.

It is possible to hold that the Highest Self, who is to be attained, is also the means of attainment. The scriptural text states thus, 'whomsoever He chooses, by him alone He can be reached' (Muṇḍ. III. 2-3).

Except Him there is no other Highest Person, because there is the denial of a highest person other than Him in the scriptural text, 'Except whom there is nothing highest and excedpt whom there is nothing smallest or largest' (S'vet. III-9-7). But there is another text, 'Tato yaduttarataram' (S'vet. III-10-7). The meaning of this text is this—There is none Higest except the Puruṣatattva (the Reality of the Supreme Person). Therefore the same Reality that is referred to in the beginning of the context, is described in the concluding portion of the context thus 'He is without form and without evil. Those, who know Him, become Immortal. The others suffer pain' (S'vet. III-10). Thus has been concluded with reason. The proposition that was made in the beginning is this, 'Having known Him thus, the self reaches something beyond death. There is no other path' (S'vet. III-8). Otherwise there will be contradiction to what is stated in the beginning.

'All these are filled by that Person' (S'vet. III-9). 'Nārāyāṇa remains pervading everything' (Tait. 11-7). 'The eternal, All-pervading, Omnipresent, and Exceedingly Subtle' (Muṇḍ. I-1-6). The scriptural statements are the injunctions that ordain men to do certain works. As there is no other way to hold the injunctions effective, it must be decided that the works themselves grant the rewards through what is called Apūrva.

40. Pūrvaṁ tu Bādarāyaṇo hetuvyapades'āt

But Bhādarāyaṇa holds the former view, on account of the designation as the cause.

The revered Bhādarāyāṇa thinks that the Supreme Person alone grants the rewards as stated before. 'Let him, who is desirous of getting prosperity, offer a white animal to the deity Vāyu (wind)' (Tait. Saṁ. II-1-1). 'He alone leads him to prosperity' (Tait. Saṁ. II-1-1). These scriptural texts themselves in ordaining certain rituals teach that the deity Vāyu and so on, grant the rewards to men, because they have the Lord as their Self. There is an established

SARVAVEDĀNTAPRATYAYĀDHIKARAṆA 1

1. Sarvavedāntapratyayaṁ codanādyavis'eṣāt

What is understood from all Vedānta texts is one, on account of there being no difference in injunctions, etc.

Each of the Upāsanas (meditations) Dahara etc., though taught in different texts, is one and the same; because the injunctions, such as 'should know, should meditate', the results, the forms and the names are common. This is similar to the case of the works ordained in Vedic texts.

2. Bhedānneticedekasyāmapi

If it be said that the Vidyās are not one on account of different mentioning; we deny this, since it is even in one.

The Vidyās are not one; because the same matter repeated in the texts without difference, proves the object of injunction to be different. It is not so. No difference is apprehended in the object of injunctions; because the same Vidyā could be repeated in different S'ākhās for the benefit of different cognising agents.

3. Svādhyāyasya; tathātvehi samācaredhikarācca savavacca tanniyamaḥ

Indeed, S'irovrata is a part of the mode of the study of the veda; because then only its unavoidability could be maintained; moreover this is so mentioned in the work called Samācāra. The rule laid down for it, is similar to that in the case of the Sava homa.

The compulsory rule as regards those, who resort to S'irovrata (i.e., vow of the head) has been given in the Atharva-Veda thus—'To him alone the knowledge of the Brahman must be revealed'. That S'irovrata forms a part of the mode of the study of the Vedas, is revealed by the scriptural text that connects it with the study of the Vedas, 'This should not be studied by one, who has broken the vow'. In the work called, Samācāra it has been stated thus—'This has been commented upon by the Vedavrata' (i.e., the vow of the study of Vedas). The word, Brahman, used in the expression Brahmavidyā, refers to the Vedas. S'irovrata belongs to them only (Ātharvaṇikas,) just as the Savahoma. Hence there is nothing to indicate that they are different Vidyās.

The scriptural statements, themselves reveal the oneness of the Vidyās. In the Daharavidyā of Chāndogayopaniṣad, eight qualities of the Brahman are mentioned. But in the Taittirīyopaniṣad they are merely referred to thus:—'That which is within the Brahman'. (Tait. II-10-23).

5. Upasaṁhārorthābhedād vidhiśeṣavat samāneca

Meditations thus being one and the same, there is combination of qualities; on account of non-difference of the purpose as in the case of what subserves injunction.

Thus the Vidyās with the same titles being the same, the qualities mentioned in one text are to be combined with those mentioned in another, on account of non-difference of purpose. This is as in the case of those which subserve the object of a single injunction.

If it be said that there is difference in the Vidyās on account of the statements; we say no, on account of non-difference.

The meditation on the Udgītha viewed as Prāṇa, is ordained in the text of the Bṛhadāraṇyaka and Chāndogya Upaniṣads resulting in the defeat of the enemy. Having retained in the heart, the view namely, The Udgīthavidyās mentioned in the two Upaniṣads are one and the same, the Pūrvapakṣin (the objector) puts forth his view as if held by the Sidhāntin. The meditation on the Udgītha viewed as Prāṇa in the Bṛhadāraṇyakopaniṣad has as its object that which is the agent in the act of singing it out. In another text (i.e., Chāndogyopaniṣad), it has as its object, that which is the object of singing. This has been so understood in the following scriptural texts, 'Then they spoke to Prāṇa of the mouth—Please sing that for us. Saying 'So be it' this Prāṇa sang loudly.' (Bṛh. I-3-7). The statement in the Bṛhadāraṇyakopaniṣad shows that the Udgīthavidyā has as its object that which is the agent

The Udgītha is considered as having as its object, that which is the object of action of singing and it is so stated in the Chāndogyopaniṣad thus—'They meditated upon Udgītha, that is viewed as Prāṇa of the mouth' (Chānd. I-2-7). Thus it is stated in the objection that the Vidyās mentioned in the two Upaniṣads are quite different from each other. The answer is—It is not so; because they have a common beginning. In one text it is stated thus—'Let us overcome the Asuras at the sacrifices by means of the Udgītha' (Bṛh. I-3-1). the Udgītha is said to be the object of the meditation in the text—'Let him meditate on the syllable 'Om' as Udgītha' (Chānd. I-1-1). Bṛhadāraṇyakopaniṣad begins with the passage, 'Let us overcome the Asuras at the sacrifice by means of the Udgītha' (Bṛh. I-3-1). Here the meditation refers to the whole of the Udgītha as the object. Hence these Vidyās are considered to be different from each other due the difference in their forms. As regards the meditation on the Udgītha, in the text of the same S'ākhā, the Highest Self is viewed as of golden colour and He is also viewed differently as possessing the attributes of being higher than the high.

This is appropriate, on account of extension.

Just as in the beginning of the first chapter of the Chāndogyopaniṣad, in further portions also there is the mention of the Praṇava. Therefore in the middle also the meditation mentioned in the text—'They meditated upon the Udgītha' (Chānd. I-2-2) should be the meditation on the Praṇava.

because it is the cause for the existence of the sense-organs, such as speech, etc., and for their functions. In the two texts, namely Chāndogya and Bṛhadāraṇyaka it is stated that the quality of being the richest is mentioned as belonging to Prāṇa, though it really pertains to the speech. But this is not stated in Kauṣītakī text. However there is no difference between the Prāṇavidyās taught in all the three texts, because the Prāṇa is said to possess the quality of being the oldest in all these texts with the same reasonings. Therefore the quality of being the richest also must be included in the Prāṇavidyā mentioned in the Kauṣītakī text.

which are among the essential characteristrics of the Brahman and which help in proving Him, have to be included in all the Vidyās relating to the Highest Self. Because the Brahman remains as the common object to be meditated in all the Vidyās.

12. Priyaśirastvādyaprāptiḥ; upacayāpacayau hi bhede

The qualities, such as, having joy for His head, are not to be included; for if the difference in head, sides etc. accepted as qualifying attributes of the Brahman, there would be increase and decrease in the Brahman.

Here the qualities, such as, having joy for His head as per the text 'Verily Joy is His head' (Tait. III-5-2) are not to be included; because these cannot be the qualities, that could determine the nature of the Brahman. Suppose the differences in head, etc. are the attributes of the Brahman. Then it happens that there would be the increase and the decrease in the Brahman.

13. Itaretvarthasāmānyat

But the other qualities have to be included as they are common to the Brahman.

Here the conclusion arrived at is this—Bliss, etc. are included in those qualities, that help in proving and specifying the Brahman. Hence they are common with the Brahman.

14. Ādhyānāya prayojanābhāvāt

Those qualities are intended for meditation; on account of the absence of any other purpose.

The teachings, such as, 'having joy for His head' are intended for meditation only; because there is no any other purpose for them.

15. Ātmaśabdācca

And on account of the use of the term Ātman in the scriptural texts.

The word, Ātman (Self) occurs in the scriptural text, 'There is the Inner Self who is different and full of Bliss' (Tait. I, II-5-2). Therefore the head, sides etc. are not the essential qualities of the Brahman.

16. Ātmagṛhītiritaravaduttarāt

The Highest Self is referred to by the term Ātman as in other places; on account of the subsequent reference.

By the word, 'Self' is apprehended the Highest Self. This is understood in this way, because there are subsequent passages, such as, 'It thought. Let me become many' (Tait. I, II-6-2) that reveal the Lord's will to become many. It is like in the case of the word Ātman (Self) found in the text 'This world was before, only one Ātman' (Self).

17. Anvyāditi cet syādavadhāraṇāt

If it be said, the word, Ātman (Self) is used in connection with other objects also, we say, it is determined that He alone is referred to in other contexts also.

The word, Ātman (Self) used in the preceding occasions, refers to Prāṇamaya. How then can it be determined that He is meant there, with the help of the subsequent passage?

To this objection the answer is this. It has been ascertained from the scriptural text, 'From the Highest Self originates the spatial ether' (Tait. I-2-1-2) that Prāṇamaya refers to the Highest Self. Thus the Highest Self alone is determined to have been meant here.

18. Kāryākhyānādapūrvam

The new thing is enjoined in the text, on account of the statement of what is to be effected.

In describing the Prāṇavidyā it is stated 'He, who knows the eldest and best' (Br. VI-1-1). Then it is stated that water constitutes a dress for Prāṇa. The Ācamana (sipping of water) has been stated thus—'Therefore, having known this in this manner, one should sip water before and after the meals. This makes Prāṇa not naked'. Here it is right to hold that the meditation upon water, that is used for Ācamana, as being the dress for Prāṇa is enjoined; because this is not established otherwise. Ācamana of water could not be enjoined because it is already established by good custom; but it is mentioned for enjoining the dress of Prāṇa. It is an accepted rules that that alone should be enjoined which is not established otherwise.

When some thing is common, there is no difference in other qualities also.

In the Agnirahasya, and the Bṛhadāraṇyakopaniṣad there are statements on the S'āṇḍilyavidyā. In one text it is stated thus—'He should meditate on the Self, who is conceivable in mind, who is in the form of Prāṇa and light, who has a true will and who is in the form of the spatial ether' (Vāja. S'at. P. Br. 10-4-6-2). In the other text (Bṛhadāraṇyakopaniṣad) it is stated thus—'This person who is conceivable in the mind is in the form of light and truth, shines forth in the interior of the heart, like the grain of rice and the grain of wheat. He is the Controller of all. He is the Lord of all. He is the Chief of all. He rules everything' (Bṛh. V-6-1). In both the texts, He is mentioned as Manomaya (conceivable in mind). Hence the statement of His controllership, does not contradict the statement of His possession of true will which is the expansion of the former. Therefore the S'āṇḍilya-vidyā of the two texts is one and the same, as there is no difference in their characteristics.

On account of the connection (of the same in both) the qualities are common to both.

The passage begins with, 'This person, who is seen inside the orb of the sun and also within the right eye' (B*ṛh.* V-5-2). Then the passage states that the true Brahman is to be meditated upon as present in the orb of the sun and in the right eye. Then two secret names of the Brahman are mentioned in the scriptural texts, 'His secret name is Ahar,

21. Na vā vis'eṣāt

This is not so; on account of the difference.

This is not correct. The Vidyās are different; because there is difference in the places with which the Brahman is said to be connected, the places being the orb of the sun and the right eye. Therefore each name is restricted in regard to each place.

22. Dars'ayati ca

The text also declares this.

The Vidyās mentioned in the two texts are distinct from each other. This is because the text 'His form mentioned

And for the same reason the two virtues namely the holding together the powers and pervading the spatial ether, do not apply to all Vidyās.

'Gathered together are these greatest powers, in the Brahman. The Greatest Brahman in the beginning pervaded the sky (Tait. Br. II-4-7-10). In the Greatest Brahman are seen together all these powers. The Brahman pervaded the sky. These attributes are not stated with reference to any special meditation. However they cannot be included in all meditations. Therefore the quality of pervading the sky is connected with such meditation in which the place other than small is mentioned. In this text His holding of the powers is mentioned along with the pervasion of the spatial ether. Hence this quality also is applicable only in that case.

The Puruṣavidyās described in the Taittirīyaka and the Chāndogya Upaniṣads are different from each other. In one of them are stated the agent of the sacrifice and his wife as the limbs of the sacrifice and the three libations. These have not been recorded in the other text. There is also difference in respect of the fruits. In the Taittirīyaka text the self of the meditator is mentioned as Yajamāna (the agent of the sacrifice). The evenings, mornings and middays are mentioned as the three Savanas (libations). The fruit is the attainment of the greatness of the Brahman. In this

The statement of getting rid of something has another supplementary statement regarding its reaching another, as in the case of Kus'as, metres, praise and singing. This has been stated.

In one S'ākhā it is stated that the wise, who attain the Brahman, get rid of the Puṇya and Pāpa. This is said to be meditated upon. In another S'ākhā are mentioned the places of entry of them. The Puṇyakarmans attach themselves to his friends and Pāpakarmans enter his enemies. In one S'ākhā are mentioned both the release from them and the places of entry of them. All these are intended for the meditation by the wise. The statement getting rid of them means both the getting rid of them and also their reaching other places. The word, 'getting rid of' means 'leaving' and the word, 'reaching' means 'entry'. It is right to hold that when the leaving alone or the entry alone is mentioned, both of them are intended. It is not right to hold the alternative course of them. The statement of the entry is only supplement to what is stated in the words 'getting rid of'. This is because it declares the places to which the good and evil works, got rid of by the wise, are transferred. Hence it follows that one should be the supplement to the other. In one place this statement occurs—'The Kus'as relating to the tree'. This is supplemented by another statement occurring in a different place, namely, 'The Kus'ās relating to the Udambara tree'. The statement, 'The metres of the gods and Asuras' has the supplementary text, 'The metres of the gods are prior.' The clause, 'He begins with gold the Stotra of the Ṣoḍaśin'

The statement, 'All the priests join in the singing' has for its supplementary statement, 'The Adhvaryu priest does not sing.' (Tait. Saṁ. VI-3-1). Thus the statement as regards the getting rid of has the supplementary statement of reaching. Therefore it is proper that the alternative course should not arise here when the other one is available. Therefore it is stated thus—'One statement will supplement another as the alternative course is not proper' (Pūr. Mī. X-8-15).

SĀṀPARĀYĀDHIKARAṆA 12

27. Sāṁparāye tartavyābhāvāt; tathāhyanye

At death the Puṇya and Pāpa Karmans leave the person: because there is nothing to be enjoyed thereafter. For, thus certain texts declare.

That there will be getting rid of the good and bad deeds at the time of death is stated in the text, 'Shaking off the sins as a horse his hairs, and shaking off the body' (Chānd. VIII-13-1). In a different Śākhā, the giving up of the good and the bad deeds on the way has been stated thus, 'The self reaches the river Virajā and shakes off his good and bad deeds' (Kauṣ. I-37). Though it has been stated so differently, it should be meditated upon only at the time of death. After the separation from the body, the self ought not to enjoy pleasure or pain, without attaining the Brahman. Accordingly in another S'ākhā it is stated that the self reaches the Brahman immediately after the death. The relevant passage is this—'For him there is delay only so long as he is not freed from the body; then he will reach the Brahman' (Chānd. VI-14-2).

28. Chandata Ubhayāvirodhāt

As it is desired; on account of there being no contradiction of either.

There are scriptural statements to prove that the good and evil deeds leave the self at the time of death. There are also statements to show that the Brahman ought to be attained immediately after death. There should be no contradiction between these two statements. Therefore the scriptural statement, 'He gives up good and evil deeds' (Kauṣ. I-37) has to be considered so as to suit the convenience. This means that this passage must be taken as coming before the earlier passage 'Having reached that path of the gods' (Kauṣ. I-21).

Then the following objection is put—

29. Gaterarthavatvamubhayatha; anyatha hi virodah

There is a meaning in the soul's going, only on the two-fold hypothesis; for otherwise there is contradiction.

The scriptural text referring to the journey through the path of gods, will be sensible only when the leaving of the deeds is accepted to take place on two different occasions. Otherwise if it is considered to take place at the time of death, then all his deeds must perish at that time. Then as he has no body, he cannot proceed by any path. Hence there will be contradiction regarding the journey, as stated in the scriptural texts.

This objection is refuted thus—

30. Upapannastallakṣaṇārthopalabdherlokavat

That assumption is justified; on account of perception of the things, that are caused by that. This is as in ordinary experience.

At the time of the separation from the body, all his deeds become destroyed. Yet it is possible for him to proceed through the path; because those, who meditate upon the Brahman, can achieve their objects even without deeds, as stated in the scriptural text. 'He becomes a self-ruler, he moves about in all worlds according to his will' (Chānd. VII-25-2). This is just as in the world, those, who serve the kings obtain all their desires, that could not be got by other persons.

Even the wise sages, Vasiṣṭha and others, enjoy the various fruits of their works, after giving up the body; because the Karmans, that lead to their holding a particular office, are not destroyed. As long as their office lasts, they remain there in order to enjoy the fruits of their deeds. They do not proceed by the path of light, etc. It will be stated that even of those who obtained the knowledge of Brahman, the deeds which actually began to yield the fruits, will perish only after their fruits have been fully enjoyed.

ANIYAMADHIKARAṆA 13

32. Aniyamaḥ sarveṣāmavirodhaḥ sabdānumānābhyām

There is no restriction, in regard to the path since all have to go on that. Thus there is non-contradiction of scriptural texts and Smṛtis.

In the texts dealing with the meditations such as Upakosala, it has been stated that those who meditate upon the Brahman as stated therein, proceed along the path of light, etc.

But there is no restriction that those alone who meditate upon the Brahman as stated in those Vidyās attain the Brahman by that path and hence they alone should meditate on that path. But all the meditators engaged in various Vidyās also attain the Brahman, and go by that path. Then only the contradiction between the teachings of the scriptures and the Smṛtis can be averted. The scriptural text mentioned in the Pañcāgnividyā (i.e., the meditation on the five fires) is this—'Those, who in the forest meditate on faith and truth, they reach the path of light'. (Bṛh. VI-2-15). Smṛti text is this—'Fire, light, day, the bright-fortnight etc.' (Bhag. Gī. VIII-24).

AKSARADHYADHIKARAṆA 14

33. Akṣaradhiyām tvavarodhaḥ sāmānyatadbhāvābhyāmaupasadavattaduktam

The conceptions of the Imperishable, have to be included in all the meditations; on account of the sameness of the object of meditation and of the possibility of the meditation, as in the case of those belonging to the Upasad. This has been thus stated

"एतद्वै तदक्षरम्" "अथ परा यया तदक्षरम्" इत्यारभ्य "अस्थूलमनण्वह्रस्वमदीर्घमलोहितम्" "यत्तदद्रेश्यमग्राह्यम्" [1]इत्याद्य-स्थूलत्वाद्रेश्यत्वादिविषयाणामक्षरब्रह्मसंबन्धिनीनां[2] धियां सर्वासु परविद्यासु संग्रहः, गुणिनो ब्रह्मणः सर्वत्रैकत्वात्; एतैर्गुणैर्विना सकलेतरव्यावृत्त-ब्रह्मानुसंधानानुपपत्तेश्च। हेयसंबन्धानर्हानन्दादयो हि[3] प्रत्यगात्मनो ब्रह्म-व्यावर्तकाः। प्रधानानुवर्तित्वं हि गुणस्वभावः। यथा जामदग्न्यचतू-रात्रपुरोडाशोपसद्गुणभूतमन्त्रस्य प्रधानभूतोपसदनुवर्तित्वेनोपांशुगुणकत्वम्। तदुक्तम् "गुणमुख्यव्यतिक्रमे" इत्यादिना॥

The scriptural texts begin with, 'This is indeed Imperishable' (Bṛh. III-8-8), 'Then the higher knowledge is that whereby that Imperishable is apprehended' (Muṇḍ. I-1-5) and end respectively with, 'It is neither gross nor minute, neither short nor long, it is not red' (Bṛh. III-8-8), 'That which is not visible and not knowable' (Muṇḍ. I-1-6). Here in the Paravidyās (the higher meditations) all the attributes of the Imperishable Brahman (such as), neither gross nor visible etc. have to be included; because the Brahman, the possessor of these attributes, is apprehended to be a single object. And because without these attributes, it is not possible to meditate upon Him, as distinct from all other objects. The characteristics that distinguish the Brahman from the individual souls, are the bliss etc. that do not tolerate the connection with evils. Indeed it is natural that the Guṇas (subordinates) are in harmony with the Pradhāna (principal). Consider the following for instance—The Mantra that stands in a subordinate relation to the Upasad offerings in the Caturātra (the four days' function) of the Jāmadagnya sacrifice, is recited in a low voice (Upāṁśu) according to the rules prescribed for the Mantras of Yajurveda to which the principal thing Upasad belongs. This principle has been explained in the Pūr. Mīm. Sū., III-3-9.

That following this argument, it could not be objected that all the attributes stated in different Vidyās, have to be included in all the Vidyās, is proved in the following Sūtra—

34. Iyadāmananāt

Only so much qualities have to be included for the sake of meditation.

The word 'Āmanana' means 'the consecrated meditation.' Only so much of the qualities have to be included in all meditations, as are useful in distinguishing the Brahman from other objects.

self, refers to that self to whom the aggregate form of material things belongs; since otherwise the difference of the two replies could not be accounted for; we say —no; as in the case of the instruction.

The question put by Uṣasta about the self (in Bṛh. III-4-1) refers to the individual self to whom the aggregate form of material things belongs. Otherwise the object mentioned in the reply 'The self is he, who breathes through the vital wind (i.e., Prāṇa)' could not be differentiated from the one, mentioned in the reply given to the question of Kahola, as freed from hunger thirst etc. It is not so. In both the places the questions are in only one form, namely, 'The Self, who is the inner self of all' (*Bṛh.*III-4-1). Hence in both the places the Highest Self is referred to. Causing the breath and the absence of thirst and hunger mentioned in the reply could be justified only in the Highest self. That the Highest self is the cause of breathing, has been mentioned in the text, 'who could breathe and live if there were not this blissful Ākāśa (Brahman)?' (Tait. I-2-7). As in the case of the Sadvidyā, the repeated questions and answers refer to the same object (Brahman).

36. Vyatihāro viśiṁṣanti hītaravat

There is the combination of ideas ; for the attributes specify the same object, as in other cases.

When the subject matter is decided to be same, there should be the combination of ideas of those who put the questions. The combination should be thus—Uṣasta should know Him, also as free from hunger and thirst ; Kahola also should bear the idea, that He causes the breath etc. because these two statements distinguish the Highest self. The same is the case in another context, namely, sadvidyā also.

How is it that the same thing is meant in the Sadvidyā, even there is the repetition in question etc. ? The reply is this—

38. Kāmāditaratra tatra cāyatanādibhyaḥ

Desire, etc. are common here and there, as known from the abode etc.

In the Chāṇdoyopanṣiad occur the following passages:—'In it there is the subtle Ākāśa (Brahman) This and what is within that, both should be meditated upon. (Chānd. VIII-1-1). 'This is the Self devoid of evils' (Chānd. VIII-1-5). 'With true desire and true will' (Chānd. VIII-1-5). In the Bṛhadāraṇyakopaniṣad it is stated thus—'In the space within the heart lies the Ruler of all and the Lord of all' (Bṛh. IV-4-22). In both these texts, it is stated that He has heart as His abode, He has true will and He is the controller of all. These references indicate that the Daharavidyā is meant in both the contexts. Therefore the qualities, beginning with being devoid of evil and ending with the possession of true desire along with the possession of true will have to be included in both the contexts.

39. Ādarādalopaḥ

On account of the purposeful statement, there cannot be omission.

'There is not any diversity here' (Bṛh. IV-4-19). 'He is the Self, said 'not this, not this' (Bṛh. IV-4-22). These negative statements do not negate the attributes, namely, being the controller of all etc, because they are purposely taught in the following text, as they are not otherwise known. 'He is the controller of all, He is the Lord of all' (Bṛh. IV-14-22). Hence there could not be any omission.

All these worlds are one with the Brahman, as they are the production of him. The statement, namely, 'There is not any diversity here' means to deny the existence of the things separately without having the Brahman as their Self. The clause, 'not so, not so' declares that the Brahman is not of material nature.

40. Upasthitetastadvacanāt

The self, who has reached the Brahman, on the very same account (moves about in all the worlds as he likes); for it is so declared by the text.

The word, Upasthita, means, 'one who has reached the Brahman! The word 'Ataḥ' means 'on the very same account' namely 'reaching'. He approaches his relatives as and when he likes as stated in the text, 'He moves about there eating, playing and enjoying' (Chānd. VIII-12-2). This is the fruit of his attainment of the final release. It is not the fruit connected with Saṁsāra. Therefore the Vidyā covering His qualities is also the Paravidyā.

There is no necessity of undertaking of the meditation on the Udgītha; because it is so seen in the scriptures. The non-obstruction is the separate fruit for it.

It is not necessary that the meditation on the Udgītha should be adopted in the sacrifices, as in the case of the Godohana (milk-pail), because even those, who do not meditate on the Udgītha are seen to perform the sacrifices. The scriptural text in support of this view is this. 'Therefore those who meditate on this and those who do not meditate on this both perform the sacrifices' (Chānd. I-1-10). The present tense is used in the text, 'That which is performed with the knowledge, will have powerful effect' (Chānd. I-1-10). Even then, the meditation is assumed to be an object of the injunction, as it grants powerful effect to the sacrifice. 'The vigorous effect' means 'the power of granting the fruits without delay, as no obstruction is caused by other more powerful deeds'. Therefore the meditation on the Udgītha gives fruit, other than that which is obtained by the performance of sacrifice and hence there is no insistence on the meditation in this case.

PRADĀNĀDHIKARAṆA 18

42. Pradānavadeva taduktam

Just as in the case of the offerings. This has been explained.

In the Daharavidyā, there is the mention of the meditation on the Brahman, as possessed of attributes, such as 'being devoid of evil, etc.' There will be the repetition of the meditations on the Brahman when He is viewed to possess various qualities one after another; because in each case He is considered to be varied on account of the connection with each of the qualities. This case is analogous to that of the sacrifical offerings. There is the text, 'He is to offer a Puroḍās'a to Indra the ruler, etc.' (Tait. Saṁ. II-3-6). The essential nature of Indra changes, as his attributes are mentioned one

The word, Nārāyaṇa, occurs in the text, 'The thousand-headed God etc.' (Tait. II-11-1). This is not a specification of the object of the meditation of the Daharavidyā alone mentioned therein. It has to be taken as a specification of the objects of all the Vidyās mentioned in different texts; because there are many statements containing particular significances in favour of this decision. Indeed, these statements while referring the objects of the meditations with the words Akṣara, S'aṁbhu, S'iva, Supreme Brahman etc. specify that these objects are nothing but Nārāyaṇa. In the text, 'Built of mind, built of speech, built of Prāṇa' [3](Agnirahasya of Vājasaneyins), are mentioned the metaphorical representations of the fire. These have to be connected with the sacrifices, which are of the nature of the principal ones having the fire in the alter built with bricks as a subordinate; which fire is referred to in the text, 'Or non-existent (Asat) alone was in the beginning'. Here the doubt is that these are alternative ones to the fire seated in the altar made of bricks. This is similar to the case of the Soma cup imagined by mind in the sacrifice of 12 days. No contradiction arises; because they may conveniently be auxiliary elements in sacrificial performances though they are imagined by mind.

45. Atides'acca

And on account of the transfer.

The text 'Of these each one is as great as the previous one' (Mādh. S'. B*r*. 10-4-1-3) transfers the power of the fire seated in the altar of bricks, to the fire of mind. Therefore the fire of mind, etc. become auxiliaries to the sacrificial performances.

46. Vidyaiva tu nirdhāraṇād dars'anācca

But it is Vidyā (meditation) only; on account of determination and what is seen in the texts.

These fires of the mind etc. belong to the class of meditation only. The meaning is that these fires are auxiliaries to the sacrifices of meditation. They are determined to be of meditation, as there is in them the metaphorical representation of fires as stated in the text 'Indeed, they are verily made of thought' (Mādh. S'. Br. 10-4-1-12). They have been determined in that way in order to reveal that they belong to the class of meditation, as they are connected with the sacrifice of meditation. Here it is seen that there are scriptural texts to prove that the sacrifices could be of the mind. 'By the mind, the cups were taken' (Mādh. S'. Br. 10-4-1-3) and so on.

47. S'rutyādibalīyastvācca na bādhaḥ

And there cannot be annulment, on account of the scriptural text etc. being more powerful than other proofs.

There cannot be refutation as regards the connection of these with the sacrifice of the meditation by the context that is weaker. Because this fact is understood by the statements

On account of the statement of the connected things, this is different as in the case of other meditations. This has been seen in other texts, and it has been so declared.

The statement of the things connected with the sacrifice is seen in the text, 'By the mind the sacrificial cups have been taken' (Mādh. S'. B*r.* 10-4-1-3). There are also scriptural texts to show that there are sacrifices of meditation—'By thought alone are they made' (Mādh. S'. B. 10-4-1-12). It is understood that the sacrifice of meditation is ordained in the above mentioned texts. This is known

Not so. The transfer is only in respect of some common attributas; as in the case of God of death. It does not mean that the person reaches the region of the god of death.

The text 'Each of these fires has the same effect as seen in that' (Mādh. S'. Br. 10-4-1-3) says that whatever fruit is obtained by the means of the fire of the brick-made altar, the same can be obtained by the means of them. It means whatever fruit the fire of brick-made altar can give through the sacrificial action, the same fruit can be got by the means of each of these fires through the sacrifice of the meditation. Br.* 10-3-6-23). Here it is meant that the person causes death to all objects and not that he occupies the world of God of death.

50. Pareṇa ca s'abdasya tādvidhyaṁ bhūyastvāttvanubandhaḥ

And by the subsequent text is proved that the word is used in such a meaning. But on account of plurality of the auxiliaries it is found in that context.

The subsequent Brāhmaṇa text also proves that the passages relating to the fire of mind, etc., refer to the sacrifice of the meditation only. The text reads thus, 'This fire is this world and the water around it is the sea (Mādh. S'. Br. 10-4-2-1). From this, it appears that what is enjoined here is the meditation with a special result of its own. In the Agnirahasya, under the section of 'sacrificial rites', is included the portion dealing with the fires of mind, etc., as many auxiliaries have to be applied to them from that context.

SARĪREBHĀVĀDHIKARAṆA 21

51. Eka ātmanaḥ śarīre bhāvāt

Some state that He has to be meditated upon as the Self of the meditator in his meditating stage, on account of the existence of the meditating soul within the body.

When meditating, the self remains within the body and has the character of being the doer and the enjoyer. Therefore some think that in all the meditations upon the Highest, the Highest Self has to be meditated upon as being the self of those embodied souls.

52. Vyatirekastadbhāvabhāvitvānnatūpalabdhivat

It is not so; but rather the difference; since it is of the being of that state; as in the case of intuition.

It is not correct to hold that the meditatior should meditate upon the Highest as the Self of him in the present state comprising the worldly action etc, But in meditating the Highest as his Self, he should realize his state.

His essential nature could be apprehended in future, only if he is in such a meditation here. Indeed the meditation upon the Brahman in His true nature, has for its object the apprehension of the essential nature of the Brahman. Same is the case with the individual self also. There is the pre-eminence in the meditation of the Bhūman (the collective aspect of the Brahman) as in, the case of the sacrifices; for, thus the scripture declares.

In the Vais'vānaravidyā it is stated that there should be the meditation of Him, who has three worlds as His body. All the worlds beginning from the heavens and ending with the earth, constitute His limbs, from the head to the legs etc. The fruit derived from this Vidyā is the enjoyment of the

Here is mentioned the meditation on Him with the aggregate form with the limbs, such as head etc. Suppose there is the meditation on Him with each of the limbs separately. Then there will be only the limited enjoyment. Therefore in order to have unlimited enjoyment, He should be meditated up on in the aggregate form, because this course only is reasonable and the enjoyment on the Brahmpn has been declared in that case only. But the statement of the fruit on the meditation on the limbs separately, is as in the case of the performance of the sacrifices as stated in the text—'When a son is born, one should offer on twelve potsherds to Vais'vānara', and again a separate fruit is stated thus 'There is an offering on eight potsherds,' (Tait. Saṁ. II-2-5). The scriptural text points out the greatness of the meditation on the aggregate form of the Brahman. The meditation on the limbs has been mentioned in the text, 'Oh! King! the possessor of the auspicious qualities (the Bhagavan), I meditate upon Him as heavens' (Chānd.

The meditations are different; because they are called by different names etc.

In Sadvidyā, Bhūmavidyā, etc., the Brahman alone is to be meditated upon and the fruit thereof is His attainment alone. But these Vidyās are different from each other; because the modes of the chief object (Brahman) of meditations are distinct from each other. That the modes are different has been determined by their denotation by different words etc. This topic was once dealt with in the Pūrvakāṇḍa of the Mīmāṁsā with reference to the sacrifices, yet it is dealt with again here to dispel the mistaken idea of certain groups of philosophers namely, that the Vedānta texts do not enjoin the knowledge (meditation).

58. Kāmyāstu yathākāmaṁ samuccīyeran navā, pūrvahetvabhāvāt

But meditations aiming other objects of desires, may, according to one's desire, be cumulated or not; on account of the absence of the former reason.

The meditations on objects other than the Brahman, grant only limited fruits. They are cumulated, as there is the desire to acquire greater fruits. Hence the meditations are either to be cumulated or left to the option of such meditators.

'Meditate on the Udgītha' (Chānd. I-1-1). Here the meditations upon the Udgītha etc. that constitute the limbs of the sacrifices, form the part of the sacrifices; because different fruits have not been mentioned in the scriptural text, as in the case of the Godohana (milk-pail). Hence no contradiction arises, in holding the meditations as the parts of the sacrifices as they are connected with the Udgītha, etc.

60. S'iṣṭes'ca

And on account of injunction.

Because there is an injunction—'Meditate on the Udgītha' (Chānd. I-1-1). There is no injunction in the text, 'That which is acquired through meditation' (Chānd. I-1-10). Hence no contradiction arises, if they are considered as parts of the sacrifices.

Therefore it is not proper to hold that there is no necessity to connect the meditation with the sacrifices as state above.

63. Na vā tatsahabhāvāśruteḥ

It is not that; because the text does not declare their going together.

This is not so; because there are no texts to show that they constitute the limbs. Indeed the term 'going-together', means 'being the limbs'. From the following text it is understood that the meditation has a separate fruit—'What

64. Darśanācca

And because the scripture declares it.

'The Brahman-priest, who knows this, saves the sacrifice, the sacrificer, and all the officiating priests' (Chānd. IV-17-10). This text declares that all are saved through the knowledge of the Brahman-priest and that the knowledge on the part of the priests Udgātṛ etc. is not auxiliary of the sacrifice. Therefore there is no necessity to connect the meditations with the sacrifices.

PURUṢĀRTHĀDHIKARAṆA 1

1. Puruṣārthotaḥ śabdāditi Bādarāyaṇaḥ

The cardinal benefit of life starts from thence, on account of the scriptural text: thus Bādarāyaṇa opined.

The illustrious Bādarāyaṇa thinks that the cardinal benefit of life results from knowledge. The scriptural authorities are these: 'The knower of the Brahman reaches the Highest' (Taiț. I-2-1). 'He, who knows Him set down in the secret abode, enjoys in the highest heaven, all desires as well as the Brahman' (Taiț. I-2-1).

On account of its being subordinate, the statement of the benefit in its case is only Arthavāda as in other cases; so Jaimini thinks.

In the text, 'That thou art' (Chānd. VI-8-7) the agent of the action is apprehended to be Brahman, on account of the grammatical equation (Sāmānādhikaraṇya). The knowledge on him is subservient to the works performed, so far as it produces certain consecration in the agent. The texts, that mention the fruits of the knowledge are only Arthavādās, (exaggeration) as in the case of the sacrificial things, etc.

3. Ācāradars'anāt

On account of such Ācāra (practice) being seen.

As'vapati Kekaya, the knower of the Brahman, said, 'Verily, O illustrious ones, I am about to perform a sacrifice' (Chānd. V-11-5). Hence it is seen in this and other scriptural texts that the conduct of those, who know the Brahman, is

It is so, on account of that being stated in the scriptures.

The knowledge is an auxiliary part of the works as it has to be utilised for the performance of works. This is stated in the text, 'whatever one does, with knowledge' (Chānd. I-1-10). The meaning of this text is this—Whatever one does, he does with knowledge. Or it means—That work, which one does with knowledge, is more powerful.

5. Samanvārambhaṇāt

Because in the following scriptural text, the Highest One is mentioned to be known—'May I become many' (Chānd. VI-2-3.). the works, that are performed without any special desire, stand in a subordinate relation to the knowlege. The works that are attached with certain special desires, have to be abandoned. Hence no contradiction arises.

the distribution is that each of them yields its own result. For example consider the following: When a man is said to have received two hundred coins for selling a field and a gem, it is naturally understood that he received one hundred for the field and one hundred for the gem.

Or granting that the study of the Vedas includes knowing the meaning also, the knowledge, that is different from knowing the meaning of the Vedas, is stated to be one of the meditations to be repeated again and again.

Not so, on accunnt of non-specification.

The text, 'Necessarily doing works here' (Īśa. 2) does not mean that the wise should devote whole of his life in doing independent works not being in the subordinate relation with the knowledge, because there are no specific reasons to hold that view. The context, 'All this is pervaded by the Lord' (Īśa. 1) also proves this. Therefore the works are known to form an integral part of knowledge. Hence knowledge is not an integral part of works.

Some also state that the works are to be given up intentionally.

'What shall we do with the offspring?' (Bṛh. IV-4-22). Here some state that the life of an householder is to be renounced intentionally. Hence the knowledge alone is the chief.

16. Upamardaṁ ca

The destruction of works through knowledge is also stated.

There are the scriptural texts to show that all works are destroyed through knowledge. 'All his works vanish, when the Highest is beheld' (Muṇḍ. II-2-8).

17. Ūrdhvaretassu ca śabde hi.

And in them, who live in perpetual celibacy, for in scripture this is declared.

It is seen that those, who live a life of perpetual celibacy, possess knowledge, even in that particular stage of life. They do not perform Agnihotra etc. in that stage. Therefore knowledge cannot be an integral part of works. This stage of life is mentioned in the text, 'The three branches of Dharma (i.e., the three states of life, namely, the life of the Brahmacārin the married life and the life in the forest)' (Chānd. II-23-1).

21. Stutimātramupādānāditi cennāpūrvatvāt.

If it be paid that they are mere glorification, on account of their reference; not so, on account of the newness.

The text, that mentions the meditation on the Udgītha, as the best of the essences, cannot mean an injunction. This is similar to the text, 'The ladle (Juhū) is the earth, the Āhavanīya is the heavenly world'. Udgitha has been mentioned as a constituent element of works. Then to state that as the best of essences is mere glorification on the Udgītha and is not an injunction, as in the case of the text, 'The ladle, etc.' It is not so, because there is no injunction of the Udgītha in the context as in the case of the ladle. Hence the meditation as the best of essences is to be taken an injunction as it is not establishad by any other proof.

We study in the texts of Vedānta in the beginning of the Vidyās certain stories, such as that of Pratardana, son of Divodāsa. (Kauṣ. III-1). These stories are connected with Pāriplava (the narration of the stories); because it is stated therein thus : 'They tell the stories'. It is not so. Certain stories such as 'King Manu, son of Vivasān' are specified for the purpose. Therefore they only have to be applied for that purpose.

The horse, which is a means of locomotion for men, requires saddle etc. So also is with their case. The permission to take all kinds of food, is only in the case of danger to life; on account of this being seen.

Referring to the meditator on Prāṇa (i.e., the vital wind) the scriptural text says 'Verily in the case of him who knows thus, there is nothing that is not eatable' (Chānd. V-2-1). This does not mean that he may take all foods at all times. But it is only when there is danger to life, because we see that even the knowers of Brahman, who possessed extraordinary powers, ate the impure food, when there was danger to life.

The text, 'Therefore the Brāhmaṇa should not drink Surā (i.e., intoxicating drink)' (Kāṭh. Saṁ.) prevents a person from doing things as he likes. Therefore all kinds of food may be taken, only when there is danger to life.

33. Sahakāritvena ca

And also on account of their being helpful in acquiring knowledge.

The works form an integral part of knowledge. This is stated in the text, 'Brāhmaṇas desire to know Him by the recitation of Vedas' (Bṛ. IV-4-22). The works are helpful in getting knowledge. Therefore the wise also should perform the works.

34. Sarvathāpi ta evobhayaliṅgāt

And the knowledge is benefited through some special works.

AIHIKĀDHIKARAṆA 14

50. Aihikamaprastutapratibandhe taddarśanāt

What belongs to this world, there being no obstruction at hand, as this is seen in the scriptures.

There is no rule that meditations, that grant worldly pleasures, take place immediately after the performance of meritorious deeds, that are capable of yielding those results. They take place immediately, provided there are no powerful works that stand in the way. But when there is obstruction. they take place after the disappearance of such obstruction, This is stated in the scriptural text—'That only becomes more powerful' (Chānd. 1-1-10).

what has the final Release for its result; that condition being ascertained, that condition being ascertained.

Likewise there is no definite rule regarding the meditations, that result in Mukti. This means that those meditations take place depending upon the existence of obstruction or the absence of the same. It is determined that the fruits are obtained, only when there is no obstruction.

'The knower of the Brahman attains the Highest' (Tait. I-2-1). Here the knowledge, (i.e., Vedana) that is mentioned as useful for the attainment of the final release, means the knowledge repeated again and again; because there is the interchange of words, 'Knowing' and 'Meditating' in the beginning and the end of the text.

But as the Self; thus the wise approach Him and the texts make them apprehend in that way.

In the Sūtras II-1-22 & III-4-8 is explained that the Brahman, is other than the individual Self. Even then the person, engaged in the meditation should meditate upon Him as, 'I am the Brahman'. Because the wise of olden times acknowledged thus—'Then I am, indeed, thou, holy divinity and thou art me'. Thus the devotees acknowledged Him as their Self. The Brahman is no doubt other than the individual selves. But the scriptures reveal Him as being the Self

He is different from the self, whom the self does not know, of whom the self is the body, who rules the self from within, he is thy Self' (Br̥. III-7-22. Mādhy.) In the usage, 'I am the man' the word 'man' which naturally indicates the human body refers to the self and the thought arrived at from the word finally takes the self as the object, because the body is always an adjunct to the self. In a similar way the word, 'I' refers to the Highest self, and the thought arrived at from the word, finally takes the Highest Self as the object who has as His body the individual selves. Therefore the form of the meditation is only as 'I am the Brahman'.

Agnihotra, etc. that are prescribed with reference of Āśramas, have to be performed till death, as they produce

Consider the texts—' His sons get a share of properties '. ' His evil deeds cling to his enemy. His good-deeds attach themselves to his friends '. Some good works, other than the Agnihotra etc. are performed from time immemorial. They are obstructed from granting fruits by other works of greater strength. VĀGADHIKARAṆA 1

1. Vāṅ manasi darśanācchabdācca

Speech reaches the mind, on account of this being seen and of scriptural statement.

The scriptural statement is this: 'O dear, when a man departs from hence, his speech is combined with mind' (Chānd. VI-8-6). Suppose a person departs from this world. In his case the organ of speech stops working even before his mind ceases to function. Hence it is right to say that speech reaches the with mind.

The clause 'For the same reason' means because there is the text—'All sense-organs are combined with mind,' and because also they stop working before the mind ceases to function. Subsequent to the organ of speech, all the sense-organs are combined with the mind.

MANODHIKARAṆA 2

3. Tanmanaḥ prāṇa uttarāt

That mind combines with Prāṇa (i.e., breath) owing to the subsequent statement.

There is a subsequent statement in the scripture namely, 'Mind combines with breath' (Chānd. VI-8-6). The mind together with all the sense-organs reaches the breath.

It is common before the beginning of the way; and the immortality (is that which is obtained) without having burned.

Both the knower and the other follow the common route till the path begins with light, etc. because the scripture says that the knower reaches the Brahman by traversing the path of light etc. 'When all desires, which once dwelt in his heart are undone, then the mortal becomes immortal, then he obtains the Brahman' (Kaṭh. II-3-14). Here the statements, such as the immortality and the attainment of the Brahman refer to the starting of meditation without breaking the connection, that the self bears to the body and the sense organs.

It is so; since upto the union with that Brahman is stated the continuance of Saṁsāra.

The self is connected with the body until he reaches the Brahman by traversing the path of light, etc. Therefore the statements on immortality etc. should be explained in the way mentioned above.

9. Sūkṣmaṁ pramāṇataśca tathopalabdheḥ

And the subtle body persists, on account of it being so observed in the scriptures.

A subtle body persists even after his departure from the gross body; otherwise he cannot traverse by the path. A subtle body is accepted not only by this reason but also because the other proofs, are observed in the scriptures such as the conversation with the moon etc. that establish the existence of a subtle body after departure. The scriptural text

For the above reason, the statement of immortality, such as 'Then he becomes immortal' (Kaṭh. II-3-14) does not mean the destruction of the connection of the self with the body.

11. Asyaiva copapatterūṣmā

And to that very subtle body there belongs the warmth, this only being reasonable.

There is reason to hold that the subtle body persists even at the time of the departure of the self, as the warmth is apprehended in certain part as the quality of the subtle body,

12. Pratiṣedhāditi cenna sārīrāt spaṣṭo hyekeṣām

If it be said that it is not so on account of the denial of his going up, we deny this for it is meant there the departure of the breath from the soul. This is clear according to some.

'He, who has no desire, his Prāṇas do not pass forth' (Bṛh. IV-4-6). That means the Prāṇas do not leave the wise. Hence the wise attain the Brahman here alone. This is not so. The wise, that leave the gross body, pass through the path of light, etc. and for that purpose the Prāṇas do not leave him. Hence it is stated thus 'His Prāṇas do not pass forth' (Bṛh, IV-4-6). This fact has been clearly stated in the version of the Mādyandinas thus: 'But of him, who has no desire, who is free from desire, whose desire is satisfied, whose desire is the self only, the Prāṇas do not pass forth.' (Bṛh. IV-4-6).

Smṛtis also declare this.

The Smṛti texts also show that the wise depart by means of an artery of the head. 'Of those arteries one is situated above; by which the soul reaches the Highest goal piercing the disk of the sun and passing beyond the world of the Brahman (Hiraṇyagarbha)' (Yājn. Smṛ. III-167).

Then the soul passes out by the way of the hundred and first artery.

The self possesses the knowledge (meditation) that acts the worship of the Highest Self encased in the heart. He receives the blessings of the Highest Self through the power of the knowledge and thinking the way of the departure, an auxiliary element of the knowledge. Through the Lord's grace the door of the path becomes clear to him. Then he passes out by the way of the hundred and first artery. By His grace the point of the heart becomes illuminated. Here the Person said to have lived in the heart is the Highest Person. Thus say the scriptural and Smṛti texts—'The Highest Self is seated in the centre of the flame' (Tait. II-11-26). Death at night has been treated contemptuously in the text, beginning with, 'The day and the bright half of the month etc.' and ending with 'The contrary is condemned'. Therefore the wise who die at night do not reach the Brahman. It is not so. The works have the connection with meditation on other than those said above. Bādarāyaṇa thinks, that the light etc., lead them who know the five-fold fires and meditate upon the Highest Self following the latter class of the meditations said above. The contradiction with the statements made in all the Upanishadic passages arise, when the object of meditation is taken to be the effected Brahman or the Highest Self alone. If the object of meditation is taken to be the effected Brahman then the scriptural texts, 'They lead to the Brahman'. (Chānd. IV-15-6). and 'Having reached the Highest Light' (Chānd. VIII-3-4) will oppose this view. If the Highest Self alone is held to be the object of meditation, then the text, 'Those, who know this (i.e., as stated in the Pañcāgnividyā) and those too who in the forest meditate with faith upon the Truth, go to light' (Bṛh. VI-2-15) will oppose the view. If the object of meditation is held to be the effected Brahman then the law of Tatkratu will also be contradicted. It is stated in the scriptures that those, who traverse through the path of light, etc., reach the Brahman and do not come back. The knowers of the five fires meditate on the self bereft of the Prakṛti, and having for his Self the Brahman as stated in the text, 'He, who remains in the self' (Bṛh. III-7-22

The contemptuous treatment about the death at night refers only to other persons (i.e. persons other than the wise).

On the self, on reaching the Highest Self, there is manifestation; as we infer from the word, 'own'.

'Thus that serene self, having risen from the body and having reached the Highest Light, becomes manifest in his own form' (Chānd. VIII-12-2). This scriptural text states that the self has been already in possession of his essential nature and it has been concealed by the beginningless Karman. When he reaches the Highest Light, it manifests itself; because thus has been stated in the scriptural text by the specific words, 'With his own form'.

BRĀHMĀDHIKARAṆA 3

5. Brāhmeṇa jaiminirupanyāsādibhyaḥ

Jaimini thinks that a nature like that of the Brahman, manifests itself on the self; on account of the declaration etc.

A nature like that of the Brahman, consisting of the qualities such as 'Freedom from evils' manifests itself in the individual self. These are the qualities of the Brahman; Yet they belong to the individual self also. This has been understood from the declaration found in the text, 'The self is free from evils etc.' (Chānd. VIII-7-1). Same thing has been stated in the text, 'He is eating, playing, rejoicing' (Chānd. VIII-12-3). This is the view of Jaimini.

6. Cititanmātreṇa tadātmakatvādityouḍulomiḥ

The intelligence alone manifests, as the self is of that nature. Thus Auḍulomi thinks.

It is apprehended in the scriptures that he is only a mass of knowledge. Therefore Auḍulomi thinks that he is of the nature of intelligence alone.

7. Evamapyupanyāsāt pūrvabhāvādavirodhaṁ Bādarāyaṇaḥ

Even it is thus; on account of the declaration of the existence of former qualities, Bādarāyaṇa holds absence of contradiction.

It has been understood that the mass of knowledge is the nature of the individual self. Yet the former qualities, such as 'Freedom from evils' etc. are apprehended in him. This is stated in the text, 'The self is free from evils.' (Chānd. VIII-7-1). The two groups of natures apprehended in the two texts are not contradictory each other. Therefore of these two forms one does not exclude the other. Therefore the illustrious Bādarāyaṇa thinks there is a collection of both the natures in the self.

SAṀKALPĀDHIKARAṆA 4

8. Saṁkalpādeva tacchruteḥ

By the mere will; the scriptures declare that.

"स यदि पितृलोककामः" इत्यादिनावगताः पित्रादयः[1] "संकल्पादेवास्य" इति श्रुतेः संकल्पादेव भवन्ति। यथा परमपुरुषस्य लीलाप्रवृत्तस्य दशरथवसुदेवादयः स्वसंकल्पादेव भवन्ति, एवमेव परमपुरुषलीलान्तर्गतस्य मुक्तस्यापि तदुपकरणभूताः पित्रादयः स्वसंकल्पादेव भवन्तीत्यर्थः ॥

अत एव "अपहतपाप्मा सत्यसंकल्पः" इत्यादिश्रुतेर्न कदापि [2]कर्माधीनोऽयम् ॥

The ancestors etc., that are mentioned in the scriptural text 'should he desires to be with his ancestors' (Chānd. VIII-2-1) are present at his mere will according to the text 'By his mere will' (Chānd. VIII-2-1). The Highest Person, while in a sportive mood is born as the son of Daśaratha etc. Vasudeva, by His mere will; In the same manner the released self, that is included in the sportive action of the Highest Person can have his ancestors in this world through his own will.

9. Ata eva cānanyādhipatiḥ

For the same reason he has no other ruler.

The clause 'For the same reason' means by the scriptural authorities viz., 'Freedom from sin, true will etc.' (Chānd. VIII-7-1). The released self is not subject to Karman at any time.

ABHĀVĀDHIKARAṆA 5

10. Abhāvaṁ Bādariraha hyevam

The absence of body, etc. Bādari opined; for thus scripture says.

Bādari opined that the Released souls do not have the instruments, such as body and sense-organs. It is because the text 'Verily there is no freedom from pleasure and pain for him while he is incorporate' (Chānd. VIII-12-1) declares thus.

11. Bhāvaṁ Jaiminirvikalpāmananāt

The presence of body etc. jaimini opines, because the text declares manifoldness.

There are texts, such as, 'He is one-fold' (Chānd. VII-26-2) that prove that he becomes manifold with the help of the body and the sense-organs. Jaimini opines that the instruments, such-as, body etc., are present in the Released soul.

अन्यशब्दार्थान्तर्गतभेदप्रतियोगी चेश्वरः, न तु मुक्तजीव इति भावः । अस्त्वेवं प्रकृते । 'स स्वराड् भवति' इति श्रुतेस्तर्हि कोऽर्थः ? स्वराड् इत्यत्र हि स्वयमेव राजेति भाषितं भाष्यकारैः । तथाच स्वस्मान्मुक्तात्मनोऽन्यस्येश्वरस्यापि नियन्तृत्वं निषिध्यत इति चेत् ; न, सत्यसंकल्पत्वतात्पर्यकत्वात्तस्य । मुक्तात्मनो हि संकल्पः सर्वोऽपि न कदाचिदपि न केनापि व्याहन्यते । ईश्वरोऽप्यस्य संकल्पं न व्याहन्ति ; यत ईश्वरानभिमतं संकल्पमयं कदापि न करोति ।

12. Dvādaśāhavadubhayavidhaṁ Bādarāyaṇotaḥ

For the same reason, Bādarāyaṇa holds that he is of both kinds; as in the case of the twelve-days' sacrifice.

There are texts to show that, as and when he desires, he can have body or not. The analogous case is the twelve-days' sacrifice, which according to the texts, belongs either to the Sattra or the Ahīna class of sacrifices.

13. Tanvabhāve saṁdhyavadupapatteḥ

In the absence of the body, the Released soul experiences pleasure etc. as in the state of dream; that being possible.

The Released soul does not possess body that is his own creation. In that case he enjoys the sport, with the instruments created by the Highest Person. This is analogous to the creation effected in dreams by the Highest Person. This is stated in the text, 'Then He creates chariots, horses, roads' (Bṛh. IV-3-10).

14. Bhāve jāgradvat

When there is the body, he experiences as in the state of waking.

Suppose he creates the instruments, such as body etc. Then he enjoys the pleasures with them as one does in his waking state.

15. Pradīpavadāveśastathāhi darśayati

His entering is as in the case of a lamp; for thus the scripture declares.

The self remains in one place. But it is proved that he experiences everything through the pervasion of his knowledge, that acts as his brilliance. The scriptures state thus: 'That self is to be known as a portion of the hundredth part of a point of a hair divided into hundred parts, and yet he is capable of infinity' (Śve. V-9).

16. Svāpyayasaṁpattyoranyatarāpekṣamāviṣkṛtaṁ hi

It refers either to the sound sleep or to union (Saṁpatti) ; for this is declared.

'The self being embraced by the Intelligent Self does not experience either the exterior or the interior.' (Bṛh. IV-3-21). It is stated that this statement of non-experience refers to either to the state of sound sleep or death. 'Alas! in fact now, he does not know himself, that 'I am he' (Chānd. VIII-11-1). Thus it is seen that in the state of sound sleep, etc. he knows nothing.

JAGADVYĀPĀRAVARJĀDHIKARAṆA 6

17. Jagdvyāpāravarjaṁ prakaraṇādasaṁnihitatvācca

With the exception of the activity for the sake of the world, he possesses the other qualities ; on account of the context and of non-proximity.

The Released self possesses all the qualities mentioned in the texts beginning from 'freedom from sin' and ending with

वर्जम् । " यतो वा इमानि भूतानि जायन्ते " इत्यारभ्य " तद्ब्रह्म " इत्यादिना जगत्सृष्ट्यादि परस्यैवेति प्रकरणादवगम्यते । सृष्ट्यादिप्रकरणेषु मुक्तस्यासंनिहितत्वाच्च । मुक्तस्यातिरोहितस्वमाहात्म्यस्यानवधिकातिशयानन्दपरिपूर्णब्रह्मानुभव एव । ब्रह्मणोऽपि जगद्व्यापारो लीलामात्रमिति " लोकवत्तु लीलाकैवल्यम् " इत्युक्तम् ॥

'True will'. He does not possess the character of being the cause in the creation etc., of the world. From the context, it is apprehended that the Highest Brahman alone possesses the power of the creation etc., of the world. The text begins with 'From Him are born all these beings' and concludes 'That is the Brahman' (Tait. I-2-1). Moreover in texts dealing with creation, etc., the Released self does not find a place. The Released self possesses greatness, that has not been concealed by anything. He experiences the Brahman in His complete nature, possessed of unsurpassed bliss. The creation etc., conducted by the Brahman are only the sport for Him. This has been stated in the Brahma-sūtra II-1-33.

18. Pratyakṣopadesāditi cennādhikārika-maṇḍalasthokteḥ

If it be said that this is not so; on account of the scriptual text; not so, because it refers to the state of him who resides within the spheres of those entrusted with special duties.

[1] इति omitted M 2, M 3.

दर्शयतश्चैवं प्रत्यक्षानुमाने ॥ २० ॥

This is the teaching of the text: 'He moves through these worlds, eating what he desires, and assuming any shape what he desires' (Tait. I-10-5). Hence the Released self creates the worlds. It is not so; because they are the pleasures of those who are in the region of Hiraṇyagarbha etc., who are entrusted with special duties. Indeed the text does not say that he controls those worlds.

19. Vikārāvarti ca tathāhi sthitimāha

The Released self experiences the Unchangeable one; the scriptures state his condition thus.

His pleasure consists of only the enjoyment of the Brahman in His real and entire nature, that does not undergo any changes. His condition has been stated in the text thus: 'Bliss indeed is He; having obtained that Bliss, he becomes blissful' (Tait. I-7-1).

And thus perception and inference show.

This fact has been stated in the texts of S'ruti and Smṛti 'From this Self mentioned above, verily, the spatial ether came into existence' (Tait. I-2-2). 'Oh! Gārgī! verily, under the ruling of this Imperishable One' (Bṛh. III-8-9). There is also the Smṛti. 'I am the source of all; everything proceeds from Me' (Bhag. Gī. X-8).

21. Bhogamātrasāmyaliṅgācca

And on account of the indication, namely, 'equality in enjoyment only'.

'He enjoys all desires and the omniscient Brahman' (Tait. I-2-2). This scriptural text says that the Released self is equal to the Highest Self, only in so far as enjoyment of the true nature of the Brahman.

22. Anāvṛttiḥ s'abdāt anāvṛtiḥ s'abdāt

No returning; according to the scriptures. No returning; according to the scriptures.

Consider the scriptural text 'He, who lives thus all the life through, reaches the world of the Brahman and he does not return' (Chānd. VIII-15-1). The Released self becomes free from all, that has concealed his true nature. The host of qualities such as, 'Freedom from sin' manifests themselves in him. He experiences the Highest Brahman, who is unsurpassable Bliss. He does not return again to this world. This has been so determined. Thus the entire truth of the doctrine is perfect and faultless.
